WHEREAS, a time limit on state ratifications of amendments is a substantive change to the United States constitution; and

WHEREAS, to have full force and effect, any substantive change to the United States constitution, such as a time limit on ratification, must be within the text of an amendment, where it can also be approved by states as part of each of the two steps of the Article 5 amending procedure: a proposal step and a ratification step; and

WHEREAS, in the proposal step for the Equal Rights 10 Amendment, the time limit on state ratifications was only in 11 the preamble section of the resolution by congress and not 12 within the text of the amendment presented to states for state 13 approval; and

WHEREAS, in the ratification step, the states ratified only the text of the Equal Rights Amendment; and

WHEREAS, a time limit was only approved by congress in 1972, but not subsequently approved by the states and is thus without force or effect; and

WHEREAS, in comparison, in 1978, a two-thirds' vote of both houses of congress passed the District of Columbia Voting Rights Amendment and included a time line within the text of the amendment offered to states for ratification; and

WHEREAS, the time limit for the District of Columbia Voting Rights Amendment ended before completion of the second and final step of ratification of the amendment by .224834.1

1 three-fourths of the states; and

WHEREAS, because the time limit was within the text of the District of Columbia Voting Rights Amendment, that time limit had full force and effect and that amendment expired in 1985; and

WHEREAS, in comparison, the text of the twenty-first and twenty-second amendments to the United States constitution both include a time line within the text of each amendment, and such time lines were ratified by three-fourths of the states within the agreed time line; and

WHEREAS, in 1789, by two-thirds' vote of each house of the first congress, the so-called Madison Amendment relating to compensation of members of congress completed the proposal step of Article 5; and

WHEREAS, approximately two hundred three years later, the Madison Amendment completed the ratification step of Article 5 through ratification by three-fourths of the states; and

WHEREAS, in 1992, having met the strict two-step requirements of Article 5, the Madison Amendment was published by the United States archivist during the administration of President George H.W. Bush as the twenty-seventh amendment to the United States constitution; and

WHEREAS, following publication of the Madison Amendment, congress affirmed the Madison Amendment as the twenty-seventh amendment to the United States constitution; and

1 WHEREAS, as of January 27, 2020, three-fourths of the 2 states have ratified the Equal Rights Amendment; and 3 WHEREAS, unlike the District of Columbia Voting Rights 4 Amendment, the Equal Rights Amendment does not have a time 5 limit in its text where it would be of full force and effect; 6 and 7 WHEREAS, in contrast to the Madison Amendment, which took 8 two hundred three years to ratify, the Equal Rights Amendment 9 took a mere forty-eight years to ratify; and 10 WHEREAS, the text of Article 5 of the United States 11 constitution gives the states the power of ratification, not 12 rescission; and 13 WHEREAS, Samuel Johnson's dictionary of 1755 defines 14 "ratify" as "to confirm; to settle"; and 15 WHEREAS, Bouvier's Law Dictionary of 1856, considered to 16 be the first American legal dictionary, states that a 17 ratification, once done, "cannot be revoked or recalled"; and 18 WHEREAS, James Madison wrote in a July 20, 1788 letter to 19 Alexander Hamilton that ratification is "in toto and for ever"; 20 and 21 WHEREAS, the various attempts throughout history to 22 rescind the ratifications of the United States constitution or 23 its amendments, including the fourteenth, fifteenth and 24 nineteenth amendments, have never been honored; and 25 WHEREAS, the Equal Rights Amendment now meets the strict .224834.1 - 5 -

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF NEW MEXICO that the legislature urge the administration of President Joseph R. Biden, Jr. to publish without delay the Equal Rights Amendment as the twenty-eighth amendment to the United States constitution; and
