GENERAL INDEX	134

"It's not what you look at that matters, but what you see."

- Henry David Thoreau

A sense of perspective, useful in every endeavor, is critical in the legislative process, where hyperbole often serves as a basic form of communication.

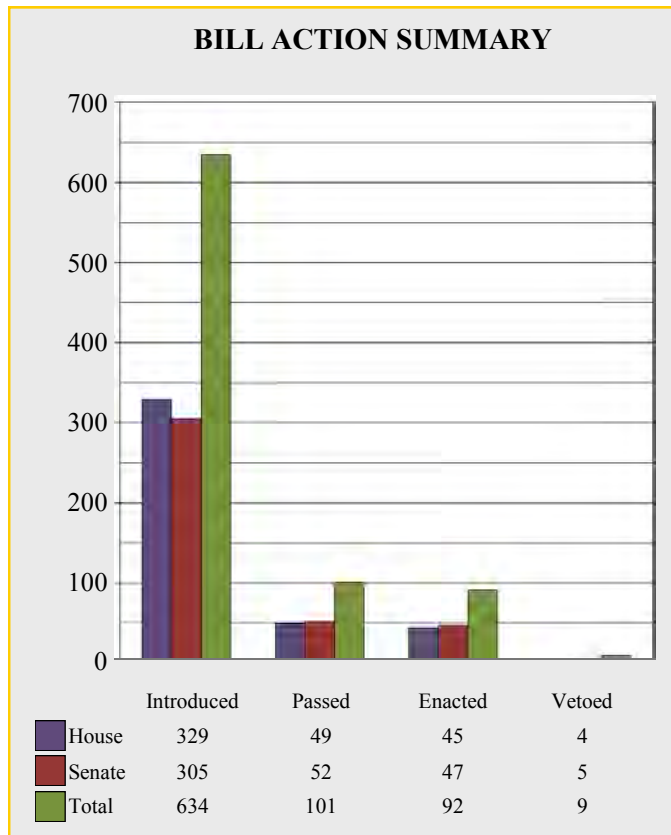

The 2016 legislative session began (and ended) with very different perspectives as to what issues were most important. The house of representatives, supported by the governor, focused on public safety, noting that recent violence in the state demanded legislative action. The senate focused on economic development, noting that New Mexico's struggling economy and weak job growth demanded attention.

Of course, stark realities can trump stances and posturing, forcing compromises that seemed beyond reach a short time ago. The legislature faced at least two examples of this during the session.

The first was the unprecedented drop in state revenue estimates, largely due to declining oil and natural gas prices. About a month before the session, state economists estimated that more than $230 million in additional state revenue would be available for spending in the next fiscal year. That estimate plummeted to $30 million early in the session and then to a shortfall of $95 million by the time the session ended. The legislature responded by reducing some budgets, sweeping funds from other state accounts and approving a $6.2 billion budget for the upcoming fiscal year that features spending levels similar to the budget eight years ago and virtually the same as last year.

The other stark reality was the announcement by the federal Department of Homeland Security that New Mexico's driver's licenses would no longer be accepted as identification to enter certain federal facilities or, beginning in 2018, to board commercial air flights. The announcement brought to a head New Mexico's five-year standoff over issuing driver's licenses to those in the country illegally. The legislature developed a compromise: those in the country legally may get new driver's licenses that meet federal requirements to board commercial air flights and enter federal facilities, while those here illegally, or who simply do not want the new license, may continue to drive legally with a driving authorization card.

The legislature also approved several public safety measures, passing compromise versions of some of the initial proposals, including a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow judges to deny bail to defendants they deem too dangerous to release and a measure to increase the prison sentences for people who possess, distribute or manufacture child pornography.

As is the case each year, the legislature considered several high-profile issues that failed to pass, perhaps none more high profile than ethics and capital outlay reform. In the wake of resignations in 2015 by a state senator and the secretary of state amid scandals, proponents of ethics reform hoped that 2016 would be the year that a proposal to create an ethics commission would pass both houses. Similarly, many members of the legislature have held for some time that the system New Mexico uses to select public works projects is inefficient and irrational. However, but for one bill that will make it easier to track lobbyist contributions to candidates, no significant ethics reforms or capital outlay reforms passed both houses.

By adjournment, the legislature considered more than 620 bills, 46 joint resolutions and more than 250 other resolutions and memorials, passing 101 bills. Of those, the governor signed 92 bills and vetoed nine, using her line-item veto power on six of the bills she signed.

The Highlights is an annual publication of the Legislative Council Service (LCS) that summarizes much, but not all, of the legislative action during each session. The omission of certain legislation or issues should not be interpreted as an indication that those are not important; each is important to someone. Many issues in the Highlights defy single-topic categorization, so every effort has been made to organize and cross-reference the contents. A complete listing of bills that passed is included in the Concordance located in Appendix E.

SECOND SESSION, 2016

AGRICULTURE

The one bill that was signed into law this year relating to agriculture is an important one in the agriculture production community. The Right to Farm Act was originally enacted in 1981 to protect established agricultural operations from being labeled as either private or public nuisances due to changed conditions in or near the area of the operations. Some dairy farms in the state are located in areas that have seen significant development and construction of subdivisions since 1981, and lawsuits have been filed by nearby residents against farmers over noise, smell or other aspects of their operations. Senate Bill 72 (Chapter 44) amends the Right to Farm Act to add a provision barring actions based on nuisance if the claims arise following the purchase, lease, rental or occupancy of property near an existing agricultural operation or facility, unless the nature and scope of the agricultural operation have substantially changed.

ALCOHOL

There was discussion during the session about the need to overhaul the state's liquor control statutes. The three bills revising the Liquor Control Act that passed and were signed into law, however, address specific licensing and alcohol sales issues rather than the state's overall liquor control scheme.

Senate Bill 163 (Chapter 73) directs the Alcohol and Gaming Division of the Regulation and Licensing Department to promulgate rules affecting the sale and dispensation of growlers of beer and cider. The bill specifically requires the issuance of rules to allow the sale of a growler of beer or cider by a dispenser or retailer, to provide procedures for filling, sealing and marking a growler and to require sterilization of a growler before it is refilled and sealed.

With the passage of Senate Bill 147 (Chapter 68), a governmental license providing for the sale of alcoholic beverages can now be issued to the Spaceport Authority. The authority may now lease liquor license rights to approved lessees for the purpose of special events held in its facilities.

Senate Bill 193 (Chapter 76) amends certain sections of the Liquor Control Act to allow service of alcohol in ski areas. The bill defines "ski area" as a tract of land and facilities for the primary purpose of alpine skiing, snowboarding or other snow sports with trails, parks and at least one chairlift with uphill capacity. Ski areas may also include facilities necessary for other seasonal or year-round recreational activities. Ski areas may currently have one or more liquor licenses that allow the sale, service or consumption of alcoholic beverages in the building portions of the resort. The bill allows an entire ski area, both indoors and outdoors, to become part of the licensed premises, similar to the New Mexico State Fair, golf courses and wineries.

APPROPRIATIONS AND FINANCE

Economic forecasters started the revenue-estimating season with reports that sounded too good to be true to some. In spite of the recent steep declines in oil and natural gas prices, which strongly influence

New Mexico's revenue levels, the Consensus Revenue Estimating Group¹ reported in August 2015 that there would be about $293 million in "new money"² available for spending in fiscal year (FY) 2017. By December, that number dropped to about $232 million. And shortly after the session started, lawmakers stared at an even bleaker revenue picture: about $30 million in new money and no end in sight to the energy sector slump and its effects on the state's economy in areas like gross receipts revenues and employment. Near the end of session, the new money projection sank to negative $95 million, further exacerbating the tight fiscal pinch. On top of those disappointing developments, forecasters estimated that recurring revenue generation for FY 2016 would drop by about $145 million from previous expectations and that New Mexico's employment growth and gross receipts tax collection levels were, and would most likely remain, languid.

In bracing for what promised to be a lean revenue year, lawmakers' options for making ends meet while contending with hefty financial strain included raising revenue by increasing taxes; cutting spending; and scouring the state's various accounts for money to transfer to the general fund. With the governor holding firm in her stance against enacting new revenue-raising measures, lawmakers opted for an approach consisting of the latter two options – measures reminiscent of the strategy employed during the revenue-starved post-recession years of 2009 and 2010.

Legislators sent the governor a plan for operating state government for the remainder of FY 2016 and for FY 2017 that relied heavily – to the tune of about $283 million – on skimming money from various reserves and depositing it into funds for spending.³ The plan cut year-over-year spending for FY 2017 by about $7 million. It included requiring the governor to proportionally reduce most agencies' FY 2016 operating budgets by $31 million and to make those reductions for FY 2017 in the amount of $62 million if revenues slid further. And the plan left general fund reserves for FY 2016 and FY 2017 hovering in the 5% range, down from the roughly 8% level forecast just before the session for FY 2016.

Legislators achieved consensus on a fiscal path forward, and the session ended without the prospects of the state economy's dark days ending as well. Lawmakers left the Roundhouse aware of the possibility, largely hinging on the future price of a barrel of oil, of having to return for a special session should the revenue picture grow bleaker. Even if the revenues hold up, many expressed apprehension over next year's revenue levels, given that the economy will in all likelihood remain stagnant, and the option for short-term fixes will be mostly exhausted.

² "New money" refers to the recurring spending power lawmakers gain year-over-year. The "new money" figure is calculated as the difference between the current fiscal year's recurring appropriations and the amount of recurring revenue forecast in the coming fiscal year.

³ Transfers and reversions are provided for in House Bill 311 (Chapter 12, p.v.). When it passed the legislature, House Bill 311 also included a reversion of $14 million from money previously appropriated for Local Economic Development Act projects. The governor vetoed the reversion.

General Appropriation Act

The governor partially vetoed the General Appropriation Act of 2016, enacted in House Appropriations and Finance Committee Substitute for House Bills 2 and 4 (Chapter 11, p.v.) (General Appropriation Act). Her monetary vetoes amounted to $2.05 million, a relatively small sum compared with other years' general appropriation act vetoes.

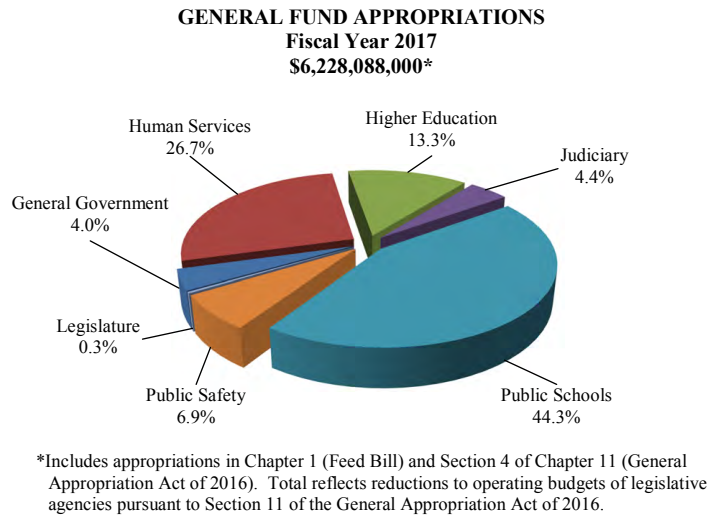

Elsewhere in the bill, the governor struck the language requiring her to reduce operating budgets by $62 million for FY 2017 if the revenue forecast showed shortfalls for that fiscal year. She reasoned that the amount might be insufficient, that it would be better to make targeted, rather than across-the-board, cuts and that the legislature should share in deciding which areas to trim.

The resulting bill represents lawmakers' priorities for adjusting current fiscal year appropriations and for spending in the next fiscal year. The General Appropriation Act provides recurring general fund appropriations for FY 2017 totaling $6.213 billion, a relatively minor decrease from FY 2016. It sets estimated general fund reserves for FY 2016 at $349.3 million, or 5.6% of that year's appropriations. Meanwhile, estimated general fund reserves for FY 2017 are scheduled to hit the post-recession low of 5.5% of appropriations, or $343.6 million – substantially below the 10% level reached in past years.

Despite state agencies having requested about $371 million more in FY 2017 general fund appropriations than the sum of their FY 2016 operating budgets, most agencies will have to make do with less in the coming fiscal year than they did in FY 2016. Still, some dodged the widespread cuts. Those agencies include the Human Services Department (HSD), whose distribution for Medicaid increases by almost $21 million; the Public Education Department (PED), whose state equalization guarantee⁴ distribution increases by $10.7 million; and the Corrections Department, whose recurring budget grows by $8.5 million. Following are highlights of those and other agencies' FY 2017 recurring appropriations from the general fund and highlights of special, nonrecurring appropriations for expenditure in FY 2016 and FY 2017.

◆ Public School Support; Other Education

Lawmakers set aside more money – if only a small percentage more – for school districts and charter schools. The amount appropriated to the PED for formula distribution to school districts and charter schools increases by .4%. Some of that distribution will be used to increase by $2,000 the base annual salary for level two teachers and for level three teachers.

Under the PED special appropriations category, $99.1 million is appropriated for various department-sponsored initiatives. Most of those appropriations are made in the same or a marginally lower amount than they were in the last fiscal year.

Under the General Appropriation Act's special appropriations section, the PED also receives $2 million for emergency support to school districts experiencing shortfalls and $1.2 million for expenses associated with funding formula lawsuits.

Overall, and as general appropriation acts historically have, the act appropriates more general fund money – $2.76 billion, or about 44% of all general fund money – to non-post-secondary public schools and education-related entities classified under the headings "Public School Support" and "Other Education" than to any other major program category.

◆ Commerce and Industry

The operating budgets for most agencies associated with commerce and industry are reduced, on average, by about 5%. Some notable departures from that average include the Tourism Department, whose funding drops a nominal .1%, and the Public Regulation Commission (PRC), whose budget decreases by 10%.

Despite these reductions, the General Appropriation Act evinces lawmakers' ongoing efforts to promote commerce and industry in the state. The act maintains the FY 2016 recurring appropriation level, $2 million, for the Economic Development Department's (EDD's) Job Training Incentive Program and, in addition, provides the program with a special appropriation of $4 million. The program aims to improve skills in the state's workforce and promote private-sector job creation.

The push to drive job creation and economic development is also noticeable in a measure to capitalize a fund associated with a new economic development tool that will provide timely employment-oriented training and education. The General Appropriation Act provides $1.25 million for the program established by the Rapid Workforce Development Act, a bill from this session that was signed into law.

Lawmakers continue to invest in one of the state's long-term economic development and tourism pursuits: the spaceport. Having not yet reached its goal of financial self-sufficiency, the Spaceport Authority receives a special appropriation of $1.2 million to bridge a projected gap between the authority's revenues and its expenditures.

◆ Public Safety

Lawmakers made public safety programs and initiatives a high-priority investment area.

A number of the agencies receiving year-over-year increases in recurring appropriations fall into the category of public safety. The Homeland Security and Emergency Management Department receives an increase of 9.1%, and the Department of Public Safety (DPS) receives an increase of 4.3%. The budgets of the Parole Board and the Corrections Department each increase by 2.9%. Special appropriations to public safety agencies include $1.2 million to process backlogged sexual assault examination kits, $500,000 to address deferred maintenance at corrections facilities and $13 million to cover the costs of incarcerating and providing hepatitis C treatments for the state's growing number of prisoners.

Though there was not enough new money to provide across-the-board pay raises for public employees, some pay increases – for certain public safety employees – will materialize. The General Appropriation Act designates $5.75 million for salary increases averaging 6.5% for correctional officers and increases averaging 2.4% for state police officers.

◆ Health, Hospitals and Human Services

The state's recent venture into Medicaid expansion has brought with it a range of challenges, not the least of which are budgetary. 2017 will mark the year that the federal government's share of the costs of that expansion drops from 100% to 95%. The state's fiscal burden heightens, too, amid continuous growth in the number of Medicaid enrollees, which is reflected in the numbers of both those who qualify under the original program's parameters and those who qualify under the expanded-eligibility criteria.

To help cover the growing costs of Medicaid, which before the session were estimated at $41 million more in FY 2017 than in FY 2016, the General Appropriation Act appropriates a year-over-year increase of $21 million from the general fund (among other amounts and sources) to the HSD. That brings the total general fund spending on Medicaid to $928.6 million and makes the program one of the state's biggest expenses. As a second prong in the strategy to afford Medicaid, the act also outlines measures the department must take to contain costs associated with the program.

The act makes a few other minor year-over-year increases for programs that provide health and human services. The Temporary Assistance for Needy Families Program of the HSD, which delivers cash assistance and support services to low-income residents, receives $3.3 million more than it did in FY 2016. The Developmental Disabilities Support Program in the Department of Health (DOH) received enough extra revenue to allow for an additional 40 participants in the in-home services program. Also targeted for investment are the Children, Youth and Families Department (CYFD), which receives a 2% budget increase, and its Protective Services Program, the program that protects children against child abuse and neglect.

Notable special appropriations in this category include: $6.84 million to the DOH for expenses resulting from lawsuits challenging aspects of the state's Medicaid waiver program for the developmentally disabled and $1 million to the Department of Environment for litigation relating to the Gold King Mine spill.

◆ Higher Education

The deflation in lawmakers' spending power came at an inopportune moment in the multi-year transition to a performance-based formula-funding model for higher education institutions.

Like so many other state-funded entities, most higher education institutions will shoulder some of the financial burden resulting from the revenue downturn. Virtually all of the budgets for the state's colleges and universities decrease by between .2% and 3.3%. The New Mexico School for the Deaf's budget remains flat, while that of the New Mexico School for the Blind and Visually Impaired increases by 10.8%. The Higher Education Department's (HED's) budget increases by a modest .8%. In all, over $828 million is appropriated for higher education institutions and the department. Much of that money, $661 million, will be used for instruction and general purposes of the colleges and universities.

To offset some of the reductions in distributions made to higher education institutions for their formula funding, the General Appropriation Act makes a special appropriation of $367,900.

◆ Legislative; Judicial; General Control

While overall judicial agencies' operating budgets increase by an average of .1%, the average budget decrease of agencies classified as legislative⁵ and general control (which includes, for example, the offices of elected state officials, the Taxation and Revenue Department, the Department of Finance and Administration (DFA) and the General Services Department) amounts to 4%.

Although most judicial agencies' budgets decrease, five receive increases of more than 1%: the Eleventh Judicial District Attorney, Division 1 (10.2%); the Twelfth Judicial District Attorney (5.4%); the Public Defender Department (1.5%; for contract counsel and litigation expenses); the Administrative Office of the Courts (1.3%; primarily for jurors and interpreters); and the First Judicial District Attorney (1.1%).

In the "general control" category, only the Office of the Secretary of State and the newly created Administrative Hearings Office see budget increases – 5.9% and 2.5%, respectively. Much of the additional funding for the Office of the Secretary of State, as well as a special appropriation of nearly $1 million to the office, are intended for election administration.

Other notable special appropriations in these categories include those to the Administrative Office of the Courts to "address court priorities" ($800,000); to the LCS for State Capitol repairs and infrastructure upgrades ($2.5 million); to the Office of the Attorney General to continue water litigation under interstate compacts ($1.5 million); to the DFA for a "payment card industry and data security standards compliance program" ($750,000); and to the Computer Systems Enhancement Fund for "system replacements or enhancements" (nearly $12.7 million).

◆ Agriculture, Energy and Natural Resources

The Cultural Affairs Department, the Energy, Minerals and Natural Resources Department (EMNRD) and the Office of the State Engineer, along with the smaller agencies classified under agriculture, energy and natural resources, fared as most agencies did, with decreases in their general fund appropriations.

In contrast, lawmakers preserved funding for the Rio Grande Trail initiative. A $75,000 general fund appropriation will support the EMNRD's efforts to establish a recreational pathway spanning the length of the state.

The legislature also made special appropriations to the commissioner of public lands for the restoration of state trust lands ($500,000) and for "historical back file conversion" ($550,000); and to the Office of the State Engineer to continue water litigation under interstate compacts ($1.5 million).

◆ Other Appropriations, Adjustments and Transfers

The Department of Transportation does not receive appropriations from the general fund but, instead, relies on funding from the Federal Highway Administration and the State Road Fund. For FY 2017, the department's funding from those sources increases nominally.

The strategy to strengthen the state's spending power includes provisions, found in Sections 10 and 11 of the General Appropriation Act, that reduce certain prior appropriations allowed for use in the current fiscal year. Excluding amounts appropriated to the HSD for the Medicaid programs and the DOH for the Developmental Disabilities Support Program, Section 10 proportionally reduces agencies' general fund-appropriated operating budgets for FY 2016 by $31 million – about .6% of the amount initially appropriated for the fiscal year. Beyond that reduction, Section 11 of the act schedules a proportional cut of $625,800 to legislative agencies' FY 2017 operating budgets.

Many small- and large-scale transfers from various sources round up millions of the dollars appropriated in the General Appropriation Act. Those transfers are effectuated by House Bill 311.

◆ Contingencies

Some appropriations from the general fund and other state sources would have been made, but for their contingency on legislation that failed. They are: 1) $100,000 to the Carlsbad Brine Well Remediation Fund, which was contingent on the enactment of House Bill 112, Senate Bill 8 or similar legislation; and 2) $2.3 million for school districts and charter schools that might have lost funding due to the public school funding formula changes proposed in Senate Bill 141.

Two appropriations from the Tobacco Settlement Program Fund hinged on the enactment of House Bill 311, which was signed into law. They are: 1) an $18.5 million transfer to the DFA; and 2) an $18.5 million transfer to the HSD's Medical Assistance Program.

◆ Governor's Vetoes

The governor exercised her veto power to strike parts of the General Appropriation Act. Vetoes to the bill are summarized in Table 3 of Appendix B.

Feed Bill

House Bill 1 (Chapter 1, p.v.), known as the "feed bill", was enacted shortly after the session began. It appropriates $21.9 million from the general fund to the legislature and legislative agencies for expenditure in FY 2016 and FY 2017. Of that amount, $5.4 million provides for the operations of the 2016 legislative session and $16.5 million supports, in the current and next fiscal years, interim activities and operational costs of the legislative agencies, including the LCS, Legislative Education Study Committee, Legislative Finance Committee, Senate Rules Committee, house and senate chief clerks' offices and Legislative Information System.

Appropriations in those amounts would presumably have materialized; however, as the session advanced, the projected-revenue figures slid. That prompted the legislature to reduce its original appropriation to legislative agencies. A provision of the General Appropriation Act decreases the feed bill's general fund appropriations to legislative agencies for their FY 2017 operating budgets by $625,800.

Other Appropriations

As discussed, revenue projections weakened with each revenue estimate made after FY 2016 began. The General Appropriation Act reflected the tumble of oil prices, which went as low as $26.55 per barrel in late January – a nearly 13-year low. The revenue slide put the general fund reserves in danger. House Bill 311 (Chapter 12, p.v.), known as the "sweeps bill", is the companion to the General Appropriation Act. The sweeps bill provides the revenue to shore up, for FY 2016, the operating reserve of the general fund and the State-Support Reserve Fund and, for FY 2017, the appropriation account of the general fund. For FY 2016, the bill provides transfers and reversions of just over $188 million to the operating reserve, including $147.5 million from the tax stabilization reserve. It also transfers an estimated $1.4 million in driver's license fees to the State-Support Reserve Fund. For FY 2017, the bill provides transfers and reversions totaling almost $75 million to the appropriation account. In addition, the 50% distribution to the Tobacco Settlement Permanent Fund, which amounts to $18.5 million, is redirected to the Tobacco Settlement Program Fund.

Through a line-item veto to House Bill 311, the governor spared the Local Economic Development Act account from a potential sweep of $14 million to the general fund. The transfer would have occurred if revenue estimates made in August 2016 set FY 2017 general fund reserves below 5%. The veto preserves money designated for projects that help businesses expand or locate to the state.

A list of all transfers and reversions in the sweeps bill appears in Appendix B.

Public Finance

State law allows the investment of up to 9% of the Severance Tax Permanent Fund in New Mexico private equity funds or New Mexico businesses. Senate Bill 15 (Chapter 48) changes the definition of "New Mexico private equity fund". The previous requirement that a New Mexico private equity fund be an entity that maintains an office staffed by a full-time investment officer in New Mexico is replaced with a requirement that the entity make, manage or source potential investments in New Mexico businesses.

New Mexico Finance Authority

As required in statute, the New Mexico Finance Authority (NMFA) received legislative approval during the session to make loans and grants for public infrastructure projects statewide. Senate Bill 106 (Chapter 52) and House Bill 167 (Chapter 55), which are identical bills, authorize the NMFA to make loans and grants of various amounts from the Water Project Fund for qualifying projects recommended to the legislature by the Water Trust Board. The NMFA also received legislative approval to make loans from the Public Project Revolving Fund for NMFA staff-vetted public projects enumerated in House Bill 12 (Chapter 35). Lists of the projects authorized in the bills may be found in Appendix B.

The legislature made three appropriations from the Public Project Revolving Fund to various funds used to capitalize additional programs administered by the NMFA. House Bill 134 (Chapter 43) appropriates $3 million from the Public Project Revolving Fund to the Local Government Planning Fund, from which the NMFA may make grants to qualified entities for infrastructure, water and wastewater public project needs. Entities that receive funding also may use the grant funding to develop water conservation plans, long-term master plans and economic development plans; to conduct energy audits; or to pay administrative costs under a local government planning program. House Bill 19 (Chapter 37) makes a nonreverting appropriation of $1.8 million from the Public Project Revolving Fund to the Drinking Water State Revolving Loan Fund to provide state matching funds for federal Safe Drinking Water Act projects. Senate Bill 102 (Chapter 25) and House Bill 160 (Chapter 29), which are identical bills, make a nonreverting appropriation of $1.4 million from the Public Project Revolving Fund to the Wastewater Facility Construction Loan Fund to provide state matching funds for federal Clean Water Act projects.

Senate Bill 189 (Chapter 75) allows the NMFA to issue and sell revenue bonds in the amount of $5 million or less for constructing, improving and equipping DOH facilities, including the purchase of land for the facilities and the planning and design phases of the construction. The bonds will be secured by a pledge of cigarette tax proceeds administered by the DFA and may be secured by a pledge of money in the Public Project Revolving Fund.

House Bill 33 (Chapter 38) suspends for an additional three years the requirement for prior legislative approval on "standard projects", which, under the Statewide Economic Development Finance Act, constitute the acquisition or provision of "land, buildings, improvements, machinery and equipment, operating capital and other personal property for which financing assistance is provided for adequate consideration, taking into account the anticipated quantifiable benefits of the standard project". The bill does not change the requirement that "state projects", defined in the act as "land, buildings or infrastructure for facilities to support new or expanding eligible entities for which financing assistance is provided pursuant to the economic development assistance provisions", receive prior legislative approval.

Capital Outlay

The omnibus capital outlay bill, House Ways and Means Committee Substitute for House Bill 219 (Chapter 81, p.v.), authorizes $114,832,098 from severance tax bond proceeds and $42,996,000 from 11 other state funds for capital projects throughout the state. After the governor's line-item vetoes, the bill funds 647 public works projects for a total just under $158 million. The Local Government Division of the DFA, with 178 projects in 30 of 33 counties, receives roughly 22% of the severance tax bond proceeds authorized in the bill. The Capital Program Fund, with 14 projects, and the PED, with 197 projects, follow closely with 21% of severance tax bond proceeds each. Projects administered by the Department of Environment receive slightly more than $13.1 million, or 11%, of severance tax bond proceeds, plus $1.5 million from the Water Project Fund. Department of Transportation projects garner 9% of severance tax bond proceeds and an additional amount of about $4.9 million from the State Road Fund. Over 5% of the severance tax bond proceeds are appropriated for three EDD projects, including a $6 million appropriation for statewide projects funded through the Local Economic Development Act.

Funding for projects included or excluded from the bill was a topic of debate during the bill's journey through the legislative process. Some legislators sought additional funding for the judiciary, particularly for the Administrative Office of the Courts. Others objected to the inclusion of $6.75 million in appropriations from the Water Project Fund and questioned whether those appropriations were consistent with established processes for making awards from that fund. Legislators also raised questions about the levels of funding for certain projects. Attempts to amend the bill, however, were unsuccessful.

The governor vetoed 154 projects totaling $8,134,902, including nearly all projects funded at less than $10,000 and 25 of the 26 projects funded through the Interstate Stream Commission. All of the vetoes for the Interstate Stream Commission were directed to local acequia and water projects. The governor's veto message highlighted the administration's view that capital project spending should be driven by state agency priorities for large-scale infrastructure projects. In addition to those vetoes, the governor vetoed language within more than a dozen projects, leaving the appropriations intact but, in nearly all cases, altering how the money may be expended.

Senate Finance Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 122 (Chapter 82, p.v.) includes four ballot questions that seek voter approval for the issuance of $174,349,500 in general obligation bonds for capital improvements for senior centers; libraries; public safety; and higher education institutions, special schools and tribal schools. The bond issuance proposed for public safety includes $18 million in capital improvements for the DPS crime laboratory and evidence center, Department of Military Affairs facilities statewide and a Las Cruces readiness center, as well as improvements to stabilize and modernize public safety communications equipment. Institutions of higher education, special schools and tribal schools would receive just over $131 million if the voters approve the question to fund improvements at those facilities. Proposed improvements and acquisitions for senior centers exceed $15 million in the bill, and $10 million is proposed for library capital improvements and resource acquisitions. Gubernatorial vetoes of two higher education projects and one tribal school project reduced the proposed spending for schools by $10.9 million.

This year's capital outlay reauthorization bill, Senate Finance Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 172 (Chapter 83, p.v.), reauthorizes 102 prior-year appropriations to extend expenditure periods, change administering agencies or expand or change the purposes of appropriations. The authorizing language for two of the projects in the bill is amended to remove restrictive language requiring that the appropriations be drawn from the unexpended proceeds of taxable supplemental severance tax bonds. The governor vetoed 10 of the proposed reauthorizations; in those instances, the provisions of the original appropriations remain intact. The governor also vetoed language within three projects, with the effect of limiting the use of funds for one project and preventing a change of the administering agency for the other two projects.

Details of projects funded in all three capital outlay bills may be found in Appendix C.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

There were 36 joint resolutions proposing constitutional amendments introduced during the session, 18 in each chamber, yet only one was passed by both chambers and will appear before the voters on the November 2016 ballot. The LCS publishes an analysis of and arguments for and against proposed constitutional amendments prior to any election in which they appear. The current publication, titled Summary of and Arguments For and Against the Constitutional Amendments Proposed by the Legislature in 2015 and 2016, will be released by the LCS in the summer of 2016.

A presumption in favor of granting bail to a person charged with a crime has been a feature of the Constitution of New Mexico since statehood. While amended over the years, the general presumption has remained that everyone who is charged with an offense shall be granted bail, unless their prior criminal record has shown the person to be a danger. The 2014 New Mexico Supreme Court decision State of New Mexico v. Brown (2014-NMSC-038) noted issues with how bond is set for pretrial release, flagging the possible practice of setting high bonds based on the nature of the charged offense rather than after analyzing a person's flight risk or danger to the community. There has been a great deal of discussion in the state over bail reform since the Brown decision, and Senate Joint Resolution 1 (C.A. 1) is the culmination of those discussions and debates in the legislature. The resolution proposes an amendment to Article 2, Section 13 that replaces the current provisions for denying bail and sets new constitutional principles for such denial. Under the proposed amendment, bail may only be denied to a person charged with a felony if the prosecutor proves by clear and convincing evidence that there are no release conditions that will protect public safety. The proposed amendment further clarifies that if someone is not a danger and does not pose a flight risk, that person shall not be detained solely because of a financial inability to post a bond.

There was one other constitutional amendment that was proposed and hotly debated during the session, but it did not pass both chambers. House Joint Resolution 5 would have amended Article 5 of the Constitution of New Mexico to create an independent state ethics commission with jurisdiction over legislative and executive branch officials and employees; government contractors; and lobbyists. The joint resolution built on the work done in previous legislative sessions on statutes proposing a state ethics commission, and it had particular impetus this year due to a number of recent high-profile ethics scandals involving elected officials.

COURTS, PUBLIC SAFETY AND CRIMINAL LAW

The governor made criminal justice a focus of the session, issuing executive messages for many bills related to the criminal justice system. These bills occasioned a vigorous debate in the legislature on the causes behind the state's high crime rates. While most of the bills were not large in scope, two bills that did not pass both chambers received significant debate, including a bill to increase the penalties covered in New Mexico's "three strikes" law and a bill to allow municipalities and counties to pass local curfew ordinances. The bulk of the bills that did pass either increase criminal penalties for certain crimes or address various matters concerning the intersection of family matters and the criminal justice system.

A bill to increase penalties for child pornography offenses prompted much debate and controversy and underwent multiple revisions. Senate Judiciary Committee Substitute for Senate Public Affairs Committee Substitute for House Bill 65 (Chapter 2) significantly increases penalties for the possession, distribution and manufacture of child pornography, while carving out a limited exception for possession by consenting teens between the ages of 14 and 18. The bill also adds new elements to the state's basic sentencing statute for felonies involving sexual exploitation of children, changing the gradations in felony sentencing that currently exist. The bill was brought forward to address the restrictions on the unit of prosecution for child pornography cases that resulted from the New Mexico Supreme Court decision State v. Olsson/Ballard (consolidated), 2014-NMSC-012.

Less controversially, Senate Bill 118 (Chapter 16) increases the penalty for driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor or drugs after an eighth offense to a second degree felony with enhanced sentencing. It also increases the penalty for someone who commits homicide by vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor or drugs to a second degree felony.

Three bills passed that address concerns raised by the CYFD. House Bill 28 (Chapter 54) makes changes to the Abuse and Neglect Act so that the department may now qualify for a pool of federal funding. The bill changes certain procedures for permanency hearings, provides notice requirements for grandparents and other relatives and modifies certain confidentiality provisions. Senate Bill 176 (Chapter 64) requires a federal name-based criminal history record check of adult residents in a home that is being considered for emergency placement of a child, and it requires immediate removal of the child if an adult resident does not comply, replacing the prior discretionary removal provision. The bill also provides for review of the information obtained pursuant to the records check and allows for charging the federal fee, but not a state fee, for the check.

Provisions in the Children's Code and the Citizen Substitute Care Review Act prescribe procedures for reviewing the cases of children who are taken into state custody for "substitute care", as well as the rights and responsibilities of entities involved in substitute care review. Senate Judiciary Committee Substitute for Senate Public Affairs Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 49 (Chapter 60) amends these provisions in a number of ways. It creates a Substitute Care Advisory Council, made up of two former substitute care recipients, a Children's Court judge and the cabinet secretaries of health, human services, finance and administration and public education. It transfers related functions and all related property from the DFA to the council, which oversees substitute care review by establishing at least three regional boards statewide and creating rules for the boards to follow in their substitute care review, including regarding the issuance of reports. When it takes a child into state custody, the CYFD must now file a copy of court documents with the council, and council staff or a contractor will then use council-established criteria to determine whether a board should review the case and issue a report on the case to the court. The law removes a provision that made substitute care review reports a part of a child's permanent record and also changes provisions designating parties that must receive notice of judicial review in substitute care cases.

House Bill 27 (Chapter 33) and Senate Bill 84 (Chapter 32), which are identical, allow for the issuance of an extended order of protection, including up to the lifetime of a person, against a person who has been convicted of criminal sexual penetration.

Senate Bill 68 (Chapter 61) makes technical amendments to the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act (UIFSA) by removing the contingent effective date and the applicability section. By removing the contingency, the 2008 changes to the UIFSA are effective as of May 18, 2016, and New Mexico has thus complied with requirements established in federal law that each state enact amendments to its UIFSA in line with the international Hague Convention on the International Recovery of Child Support and Other Forms of Family Maintenance.

Two bills relating to process issues in the criminal justice system were passed. House Floor Substitute for House Judiciary Committee Substitute for House Regulatory and Public Affairs Committee Substitute for House Bill 72 (Chapter 9) addresses concerns about people who have a history of violent criminal behavior from the time they were young. The bill provides that youthful offender records for felony offenses can be used when considering bail for those 30 years old and younger, but those records may only be reviewed in camera and must be sealed. House Judiciary Committee Substitute for House Bill 296 (Chapter 31) and Senate Public Affairs Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 257 (Chapter 27), which are identical, modify a provision of the Probation and Parole Act to allow for the tolling of probation time for someone who absconds from probation after conviction of a crime in district, metropolitan or municipal court. The bill responds to a recent court opinion that held that the current statutory tolling provisions for probationers only apply to the district court.

House Bill 270 (Chapter 34) requires New Mexico courts to enforce exclusive forum selection and choice of law provisions in contracts with respect to medical malpractice claims or civil actions against a licensed health care provider.

House Bill 92 (Chapter 41), relating to law enforcement, amends the Peace Officers' Survivors Supplemental Benefits Act. Changes to the act make benefits available to survivors of New Mexico Mounted Patrol members and reserve police officers who are killed in the line of duty. The act is renamed the "Peace Officers', New Mexico Mounted Patrol Members' and Reserve Police Officers' Survivors Supplemental Benefits Act" to reflect the expanded scope, as are the benefits review committee and fund that are created in the act.

House Regulatory and Public Affairs Committee Substitute for House Bill 336 (Chapter 10) addresses two matters concerning computer records. Part of the bill gives the secretary of public safety authority to create and manage a database that merges criminal records data from various other state databases and gives courts and law enforcement agencies access to comprehensive criminal background records of criminal suspects and defendants. The bill also requires reporting of a person's eligibility to receive or possess a firearm or ammunition or obtain a concealed handgun license to the Federal Bureau of Investigation's National Instant Criminal Background Check System.

In recognition of the growing incidence of lead battery theft, Senate Bill 76 (Chapter 51) amends the Sale of Recycled Metals Act to aid law enforcement in preventing and solving lead metal theft crimes. The act, which already required secondhand metal dealers to keep records of the purchase of certain materials that are targets of theft due to their high resale value, now also requires those dealers to keep records of the purchase of lead batteries and other material readily identifiable as lead.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

As New Mexico continues to struggle with post-recession economic and employment recovery, the legislature passed three bills during the session that address economic development and job creation. Two of those bills create new economic development programs to assist and train workers, and the third expands the scope of the Local Economic Development Act, which enables the state to provide assistance to certain businesses.

One of the interim legislative Jobs Council's ideas for bolstering job creation took shape as House Bill 177 (Chapter 57). The bill creates the Solo-Worker Program, through which the EDD may provide matching funds to certain organizations for encouraging the growth of solo-work employment. In the program's context, solo workers are defined as performing work somewhat or entirely independent of an employer and as deriving most of their income from out-of-state sources.

Senate Bill 92 (Chapter 23) enacts the Rapid Workforce Development Act, which allows the state to provide targeted job-training assistance to workers in New Mexico. The new law provides that the secretaries of economic development, higher education and workforce solutions will identify employers that could create jobs in the state for workers with certain skills or training, determine whether existing or new higher education programs could provide the requisite training or education and authorize the use of money in the newly created Rapid Workforce Development Fund to establish or support those higher education programs.

One of the job creation tools at a local government's disposal is the ability, made possible through the Local Economic Development Act, to help private businesses establish or expand their presence in the jurisdiction. House Bill 139 (Chapter 14) allows a municipality with a population between 10,000 and 35,000 to pursue a Local Economic Development Act project for a retail business, as long as the project is not funded by the state and will not create direct competition with certain existing businesses.

EDUCATION

Given the legislature's need to address rapidly disappearing revenues and the governor's focus on criminal law issues, the subject of education was generally not one of the most talked about during the 2016 session. With a message from the governor, a single version of the perennial, so-called "third grade retention bill" passed the house at the end of January but did not get a committee hearing in the senate.

Of the 123 bills designated as education-related that were introduced in the 2016 legislative session, seven bills – two of which were identical – were passed by both chambers and signed into law by the governor. Two measures were vetoed by the governor with messages, and no education-related bills were pocket vetoed. The measures that did pass generally addressed issues that had been discussed during the interim in various interim committees. In addition, two identical joint resolutions, which do not require action by the governor, passed both chambers.

Public Schools

Introduced in response to criticism that students spend too much class time preparing for and taking standardized tests, House Bill 97 (Chapter 56) eliminates short-cycle diagnostic assessments in reading, language arts and mathematics for students in grades 9 and 10, allowing for more money and instructional time for other assessments for those students.

The "K Plus" program started in 2007 as a pilot project to increase time spent in kindergarten for low-income students. The legislature extended the program to third grade (dubbed "K-3 Plus") and made it permanent in 2012. The program is based on the premise that additional time spent in school could narrow the achievement gap between certain disadvantaged students and other students, better prepare kindergartners for elementary school, reduce truancy rates and increase cognitive skills. Senate Bill 81 (Chapter 62) further extends the program, again as a pilot, to kindergarten through fifth grade. Known as "K-5 Plus", this pilot program is established for four years. The program will give priority to public schools that have a current "K-3 Plus" program.

In the economic downturn after 2008, the legislature gave school districts flexibility to increase or decrease requirements for class size, teaching load, length of school day, staffing patterns, subject areas and purchases of instructional materials. The state is now in a similar position and has had to tinker with both the current- and next-fiscal-year budget appropriations. In the face of uncertainty, the legislature enacted Senate Public Affairs Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 306 (Chapter 22), which allows for the same flexibility school districts were allowed from FY 2010 through FY 2015. The bill also repeals the section of law that provides for phasing in the statutory requirements that were waived pursuant to that 2010 law. The PED, however, still must approve the waivers and ensure that their implementation does not adversely affect student learning.

Health education is already included in the required curriculum for students in fourth through twelfth grades. House Health Committee Substitute for House Bill 104 (Chapter 17) and Senate Education Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 1 (Chapter 18) add life-saving skills training to health education courses. Before graduating, students will be trained to recognize the signs of a heart attack, use an automated external defibrillator, perform cardiopulmonary resuscitation and perform the Heimlich maneuver. Prior to enactment of these measures, the sole health education requirement consisted of age-appropriate sexual abuse and assault awareness and prevention training.

Research indicates that hunger negatively impacts children's success in school. Schools in which 85% or more of the students qualify for free or reduced-price lunches must provide a "breakfast after the bell program" for all students, but school administrators have expressed confusion over whether the law allows breakfast to be provided in a variety of locations. Senate Education Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 144 (Chapter 26) provides school districts and charter schools with flexibility to provide breakfast before school in the school cafeteria, for example, or at a location of the school's choice, including on school buses in isolated rural areas where students must ride long distances to get to school.

Statute requires the legislature to ratify and approve any governmental entity's plan to dispose of real property valued at more than $100,000. Identical joint resolutions, Senate Joint Resolution 19 and House Joint Resolution 21, provide legislative approval for the sale of real property by the Pecos Valley Regional Education Cooperative. The property, which is owned by the cooperative and located in Artesia, has housed the cooperative's main offices since it was established. Because the facility can no longer accommodate its current space needs, the cooperative plans to use proceeds from the sale of the property to purchase replacement office space.

Post-Secondary Education

Senate Bill 280 (Chapter 21) clarifies definitions and other provisions of the Legislative Lottery Tuition Scholarship Act. It makes clear that New Mexico Military Institute is covered by the act as a two-year state higher educational institution and that its distribution is based on the uniform percentage for community colleges; distinguishes between public post-secondary educational institutions that include both state institutions and community colleges and state educational institutions in Article 12, Section 11 of the Constitution of New Mexico; and clarifies that program semesters are those semesters during which a student is receiving a lottery scholarship.

ELECTIONS

Proposed legislation touched on many aspects of the electoral process during the session, but only two bills were enacted into law – one that extends the franchise in primary elections and another that addresses deficiencies in the campaign reporting system.

Residents of New Mexico who are 17 years of age and who will be qualified to vote in the next general election will now be allowed to vote in the primary election immediately preceding that election with the enactment of House Bill 138 (Chapter 28). The bill also allows anyone who would otherwise be qualified to vote in a party's presidential primary to participate in that party's alternate selection process if the party chooses not to participate in the presidential primary.

Both the Campaign Reporting Act and the Lobbyist Regulation Act require the reporting of campaign contributions made to candidates for office; however, inconsistencies in the reporting requirements of the two acts made it difficult to track and reconcile the contribution amounts of donors with the amounts reported by candidates. House Bill 105 (Chapter 13) addresses this problem by eliminating the double reporting of contributions by lobbyists and their employers and integrating the reporting requirements of the two acts, as well as requiring the secretary of state to develop, by the end of 2017, a more user-friendly electronic reporting system. In addition, the bill changes reporting requirements so that only expenditures of $100 or more must be reported, instead of the cumulative total of expenditures by category, and it establishes the Campaign Reporting System Fund to help defray the annual operation and maintenance costs of the new electronic reporting system.

EMPLOYMENT AND LABOR

Several bills were introduced in the 2016 session addressing the rights and duties of private-sector employees and employers. The bills that were introduced related to minimum wage, pay equity and union membership, and two bills were passed by both houses and signed by the governor. The measures that passed address elements of employee benefit programs mandated by the state, workers' compensation and unemployment insurance.

Senate Bill 214 (Chapter 24) clarifies and expands on the provisions that determine workers' compensation benefits due in the case of an injured worker found to have been partly or fully responsible for the workplace injury because of voluntary intoxication or drug use. Under the new law, the amount that the worker otherwise would receive generally must be reduced in proportion to the degree the worker contributed to the injury, but no less than 10% and no more than 90%. The benefit can be barred or, alternatively, not reduced if a party fails to meet its obligations; for example, if the worker refuses to submit to alcohol or drug testing, the worker receives no benefit. If the employer does not take specific precautions, which include adopting a drug- and alcohol-free workplace policy and attempting to prevent the injury when the employer does or should know of the worker's intoxicated state, the worker is entitled to the full benefit. The bill also defines relevant terms and outlines provisions for drug and alcohol testing.

With substantial reform enacted in 2013 to the state's unemployment insurance system, many employers recently saw increases in their unemployment insurance contribution rates. House Judiciary Committee Substitute for House Business and Employment Committee Substitute for House Bill 283 (Chapter 92) offers some financial relief to employers associated with relatively low use of the system by establishing an "experience history" rating. The rating, based on the difference between recent contribution payments and benefit charges, will factor into employers' rate computations beginning with the July 1, 2016 payment period. The bill further caps the amount an employer's rate may increase from year to year, although the lawfulness of the cap is in question. If the provision is deemed out of compliance with federal law, the Workforce Solutions Department, which administers the unemployment insurance program, might be required to suspend its application.

ENERGY, ENVIRONMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Two new interstate compacts are among the four measures enacted during the session in the areas of energy, environment and natural resources: one that facilitates interstate cooperation in fighting wildland fires and another that concerns regulation of mines. A third measure expands the purposes for which an existing fund may be used to include reduction of forest fire potential and enhancement of watersheds, and the fourth measure moves responsibility for policy enforcement in geothermal resource development and conservation.

In order to quickly and efficiently deploy adequate resources to suppress wildfires, the state might need assistance from appropriate firefighting agencies from other states. In turn, other states may benefit from New Mexico's expertise in and extensive resources for fighting wildland fires. Senate Bill 128 (Chapter 66) adopts the Interstate Compact for the Prevention and Control of Forest Fires, which establishes legal authority for the sharing of firefighting resources across state lines. Under the compact, a member state that renders aid is eligible for reimbursement by the recipient state.

Watershed restoration projects have been initiated in various parts of the state in recent years to prevent catastrophic wildfires and to protect the state's water resources. Senate Bill 110 (Chapter 65) expands the purpose of the Forest Land Protection Revolving Fund to allow use of the fund for expenses related to forest and watershed management projects, and it makes the money in the fund subject to legislative appropriation.

Senate Bill 173 (Chapter 74), which enacts the Interstate Mining Compact Act, allows the governor to join the Interstate Mining Compact Commission, a body that provides a forum for states to discuss and provide training on significant national and regional issues related to mining, particularly surface coal mining.

The Geothermal Resources Development Act, enacted by House Bill 289 (Chapter 71) and Senate Bill 223 (Chapter 78), replaces the Geothermal Resources Conservation Act, which is repealed by these bills. The new act shifts authority to regulate the development and conservation of geothermal resources from the Oil Conservation Division to the Energy Conservation and Management Division, both of which are within the EMNRD. The act also establishes administrative penalties for violations of the act, provides for appeals to district court and allows water rights claimants to file actions in district court for damages from geothermal resource exploration, development or production.

HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

Although several issues affecting health and human services caught the attention of the legislature, medical cannabis and opioids emerged as the hot topics in this area. While a medical cannabis program already exists in New Mexico under the Lynn and Erin Compassionate Use Act, several introduced bills proposed amendments to the act to include provisions relating to medical cannabis research, the processing of financial transactions for medical cannabis and local approval of the location of production facilities. Other bills proposed changes to workers' compensation statutes to remove medical cannabis as a reimbursable benefit; however, those bills died in committee. The senate rejected a proposed constitutional amendment legalizing, regulating and taxing adult possession and use of marijuana, with the revenue going to fund the state's Medicaid program or drug and alcohol rehabilitation. A half-dozen bills and two memorials were introduced to provide for the study, prevention and treatment of opioid abuse, and three of these bills were signed into law.

New Mexico is one of the states that has been hardest hit by the opioid abuse epidemic and has among the nation's highest rates of opioid overdose deaths. The timely administration of an opioid antagonist – such as naloxone in the form of an easy-to-use nasal spray – can reverse an overdose and save a life. The federal Food and Drug Administration has not approved naloxone as an over-the-counter drug, so it is necessary to have a prescription to obtain it. House Health Committee Substitute for House Bill 277 (Chapter 47) and Senate Bill 262 (Chapter 45) make it legal for a licensed prescriber to issue standing orders allowing a pharmacist to dispense an opioid antagonist to virtually anyone. Opioid antagonists may be provided to a person at risk of an opioid-related drug overdose; to friends or family members or other persons who are in a position to assist a person in the event of an overdose; to employees or volunteers of a community-based organization with an overdose prevention and education program that is registered with the DOH; or to first responders. The bills authorize the possession of an opioid antagonist without a prescription and provide immunity from civil suit, criminal prosecution or professional discipline to persons acting with reasonable care who possess, administer, dispense or distribute opioid antagonists such as naloxone that are approved by the DOH.

New Mexico and many other states have prescription monitoring programs and databases to detect the overprescribing and abuse of opioids. Senate Bill 263 (Chapter 46) now requires a health care practitioner, when prescribing or dispensing opioids for more than four days to a patient for the first time, to first check the state's prescription monitoring program database and those of adjacent states, if available, to review what drugs the patient has been prescribed in the previous 12 months. A practitioner who continuously prescribes or dispenses opioids to an established patient is required to check New Mexico's prescription monitoring program database and those of adjacent states, if available, at least every three months to see what drugs the patient has been prescribed. These provisions do not apply to a practitioner who prescribes opioids to a patient in a nursing facility or in hospice care. The professional licensing boards of practitioners who are licensed or otherwise authorized to prescribe or dispense opioids are directed to promulgate rules to implement this law, which becomes effective on January 1, 2017.

House Bill 103 (Chapter 42) amends law concerning loans to students enrolled in or accepted by a New Mexico college of osteopathic medicine who achieve licensure and practice in New Mexico for four years following their graduation. With the amendments, a progressively larger portion of the loan is forgiven for each year the loan recipient practices as an osteopathic physician or osteopathic physician's assistant in an area of the state designated as a health professional shortage area. A loan recipient who fails to complete the required education, or to perform the full length of required professional service, is subject to interest and penalties on any unforgiven indebtedness.

Congress enacted the Stephen Beck, Jr., Achieving a Better Life Experience Act of 2014 as part of the federal Tax Increase Prevention Act of 2014, allowing states to establish a program of tax-advantaged accounts for the support of persons with disabilities. House Bill 61 (Chapter 40) is the enabling legislation to create such a program to be administered and maintained by the Office of the State Treasurer. Accounts may be established by private individuals with a financial organization or a fiduciary to pay for qualified disability expenses for the benefit of a person who is disabled. The Office of the State Treasurer is required to ensure that federal program requirements are met and to periodically report certain information to the federal Social Security Administration.

New Mexico's Missing Persons Information and Reporting Act is expanded by Senate Bill 21 (Chapter 8) to include a person with a developmental disability who goes missing and whose health or safety is at risk and to provide for the issuance of a "Brittany Alert" by the DPS to request the public's assistance in locating that person.

Since 2010, there have been Public School Code provisions establishing protocols for addressing certain brain injuries sustained by student athletes participating in school-related athletics. Senate Bill 137 (Chapter 53) establishes protocols to address brain injuries sustained by young athletes participating in activities outside of school. It also amends the provisions in the Public School Code relating to the definition of "licensed health professional"; clarifies that a medical release to return to activity must be written; and increases the amount of time a student athlete is barred from participation in sports after certain instances of brain injury from a period of one week to 240 hours from the hour in which the injury was sustained.

The Assisted Outpatient Treatment Act, enacted in Senate Bill 113 (Chapter 84), creates a civil proceeding in which a mentally ill individual with a history of non-adherence to treatment may be placed under a court order and required, as a condition of remaining in the community, to comply with a comprehensive treatment plan. Data from other states with similar laws indicate that assisted outpatient treatment reduces hospitalizations, involvement with law enforcement and incarceration for a small population of those with serious mental illness. Local governments and courts are authorized to "opt-in" to establish an assisted outpatient treatment program by entering into a memorandum of understanding with each other relating to the funding of the court's administrative expenses and legal fees associated with the proceedings. This law does not require or authorize the forcible medication or physical restraint of the person who is the subject of the court's order.

For a health care provider to be included in a particular health insurer's provider network, the health insurer must verify and evaluate a provider's qualifications, involving a process known as "credentialing". In 2015, four sections of law were enacted in the New Mexico Insurance Code, the Health Maintenance Organization Law and the Nonprofit Health Care Plan Law to require the timely credentialing of health care providers and provide for interest to be paid on properly submitted claims for services rendered to an insured patient. Senate Public Affairs Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 234 (Chapter 20) further refines provisions relating to credentialing, payment and rates of reimbursement. It expands the definition of "provider" to include providers licensed in other states; allows provisional credentialing of a health care provider for up to one year; and specifies that the superintendent of insurance shall certify no more than two types of credentialing application forms to be used beginning on January 1, 2017.

Senate Bill 78 (Chapter 90) updates the licensing act for osteopathic physicians and osteopathic physician assistants to reflect current terminology and practice in the field of osteopathic medicine.

INSURANCE

The one insurance bill that was passed and signed into law, Senate Bill 108 (Chapter 89), updates and streamlines sections of the New Mexico Insurance Code to allow the Office of Superintendent of Insurance to replace its current proprietary software system with a system designed and promoted by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners to administer, monitor and enforce many functions related to company and producer licensing. The bill amends or replaces provisions of the New Mexico Insurance Code to bring the statutes into closer conformance with regulatory practice throughout the United States. Significant components of the bill change the terms "agent" and "broker" to "producer"; revise the broad definitions of the various types of insurance; and provide lists of insurance products that are to be found in each of these broad types of insurance.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Two bills were enacted this year to increase the fiscal and managerial efficiency of local governments, one of which applies only to Los Alamos County, the sole H class county in the state. A third bill allows for a new use of lodgers' tax revenue by local governments.

Los Alamos County has found that the workload of some elected and appointed officials cannot be accomplished on a part-time basis as dictated by statute, forcing the county to hire outside assistance. House Bill 18 (Chapter 36) gives the governing board of an H class county the option of designating the offices of treasurer, assessor, county clerk and probate judge as full-time or part-time and providing the employees in these positions with commensurate salaries so they may be effective in the jobs.

One of a municipal or county treasurer's responsibilities is, within certain legal limits, to invest public money not immediately needed for public use. Senate Bill 56 (Chapter 50) gives treasurers the option to invest money in federally insured obligations, which tend to yield higher returns than many of the investments currently allowed by law.

When someone says "airport", most people in the state think "Albuquerque". But there are other municipalities and counties that are working to attract and retain local or regional air service to boost both economic- and tourism-related development. House Bill 192 (Chapter 30) expands the use of lodgers' tax revenue for municipalities and counties that have airports to allow them to use the revenue for a required minimum revenue guarantee for air service to that municipality or county. The ability to fly to a local destination will allow tourists to more easily access the tourist-related facilities, attractions and events of the municipality or county in which an airport is located.

MILITARY AND VETERANS' AFFAIRS

Five bills relating to veterans and members of the military passed during the session, all of which were signed into law. Veterans attending college will benefit from a bill requiring development of a consistent system for evaluating and awarding college credit for military service, as well as a bill changing the definition of "veteran" in some sections of law, including the section pertaining to resident tuition for veterans and their family members. Other bills signed into law change the name of the fund used to pay for veterans' cemeteries, clarify preferences in the Procurement Code for veteran-owned businesses and authorize new awards for military service.

In an effort to encourage military service members and veterans to attend college and attain degrees more quickly, Senate Bill 153 (Chapter 3) requires the HED, in coordination with the institutions of higher education in New Mexico, to study, create and implement a consistent policy and develop a single articulation agreement regarding the evaluation and award of academic credit toward associate's, bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees based on a person's military training and experience.

House Bill 17 (Chapter 4) conforms the definition of "veteran" in Section 9-22-3 NMSA 1978, which provides the definitions for the Veterans' Services Department Act; Section 21-1-4.5 NMSA 1978, which allows resident tuition for veterans and their family members; and Section 66-3-412 NMSA 1978, which authorizes a disabled veteran special registration plate. The changes include removing the requirement that a veteran be a United States citizen and, for Section 21-1-4.5 NMSA 1978, that a person be discharged under conditions other than dishonorable.

House Bill 185 (Chapter 7) changes the name of the Veterans' National Cemetery Fund to the Veterans' State Cemetery Fund. The bill also requires that $1,070,000 of the individual income tax refund contributions to the Veterans' State Cemetery Fund be first distributed to the City of Santa Fe.

After several years of confusion regarding the original language, House Bill 93 (Chapter 5) amends the resident veteran-owned business preference for Procurement Code bids. Under the new language, a Procurement Code bid submitted by a resident veteran-owned business that earned $3 million or less in the previous year will be considered 10% lower than the bid actually submitted. The bill removes the cap on how much money the state can dedicate to the veteran-owned business preference, while limiting the benefit awarded to any individual veteran-owned business to not more than 10 consecutive years.

Five new awards for service in the National Guard of New Mexico or State Defense Force are authorized by House Bill 156 (Chapter 6), which also reorders the precedence of several existing awards.

MOTOR VEHICLES AND TRANSPORTATION

Several new laws relating to motor vehicles and transportation will take effect in 2016, including some that failed to survive the legislative process in years past. Topics range from expanding local control and jurisdiction over roads to compliance with federal law. By far, the highest-profile measure in the category that was signed into law this year is one that, after more than half a decade of discussion and an abundance of previously unsuccessful legislation, brings New Mexico into compliance with the federal REAL ID Act of 2005.

When the state overran a 2015 deadline to comply with the federal act, state-issued identification cards and driver's licenses became unacceptable for entry at certain federal facilities. With another deadline fast approaching – a deadline that would render these forms of identification unacceptable for boarding commercial air flights – the legislature reached a compromise with House Bill 99 (Chapter 79). The bill's provisions start the process of bringing the state into compliance with federal law and secure an extension that allows New Mexicans to use their identification cards and driver's licenses to enter federal facilities and board commercial air flights.

Under the provisions of the law, New Mexico residents who are in the country legally – known as "lawful status" – will have a choice between obtaining: 1) a REAL ID-compliant driver's license or identification card; or 2) a non-REAL ID-compliant driving authorization card or identification card. New Mexico residents without lawful status will have a choice between obtaining a non-REAL ID-compliant driving authorization card or identification card; they will also be fingerprinted if they do not already have a New Mexico license or identification card.

The federal government has set out what documents are required of those applying for REAL ID-compliant identification cards and driver's licenses to verify identity, date of birth, social security number, if applicable, address of current residence and lawful status. Applicants for non-REAL ID-compliant identification cards and driving authorization cards may show proof of identity and age using a valid New Mexico driver's license or identification card; a passport or identification document issued by the applicant's country of origin; or a certified letter of enrollment or identification card issued by a federally recognized Indian nation, tribe or pueblo.

The law raises from 75 years to 79 years the age at which drivers must renew their REAL ID-compliant driver's licenses or driving authorization cards on a yearly basis, though those renewals will continue to be free.

With the growth of the ridesharing industry across the nation and the world, New Mexico dipped its foot into the shallow end by providing statutory authority for regulation of personal transportation services based on smart phone applications, such as those provided by Uber and Lyft. Senate Judiciary Committee Substitute for House Bill 168 and Senate Bill 254 (Chapter 80) enacts the Transportation Network Company Services Act, which provides for:

- ▶ exemption of transportation network companies and their drivers from the Motor Carrier Act, which regulates taxicabs and other commercial transportation services operators;
- ▶ the PRC to adopt rules and issue permits regarding transportation network companies;
- ▶ fare calculation method disclosure;
- ▶ digital network information about the driver and vehicle prior to a prearranged ride;
- ▶ minimum insurance coverage by the transportation network driver or the transportation network company;
- ▶ zero tolerance for drug or alcohol use;
- ▶ transportation network company driver qualifications and requirements; and
- ▶ vehicle safety standards.

Senate Bill 171 (Chapter 63) narrows the application of the lifetime ban on obtaining a commercial driver's license for persons using commercial vehicles while committing a felony sale, distribution or manufacture of a controlled substance. Under the previous language, the ban applied to a driver's use of, or intention to use, a commercial vehicle in the commission of a drug trafficking felony; it now applies only to those drivers convicted of using a commercial vehicle while committing a felonious sale, distribution or manufacture of a controlled substance. The bill also bolsters the legislature's efforts to address traffic safety concerns posed by the use of mobile communication devices by prohibiting commercial drivers from using hand-held communication devices. Commercial drivers who violate this prohibition, or any driver who violates the ban on texting while driving that was enacted in 2014, will be deemed to have committed a "serious traffic violation" as defined within the Motor Vehicle Code.

With an eye to giving rural communities options to accommodate the needs of farmers and hunters, Senate Bill 270 (Chapter 91) allows county and municipal governments, or the State Transportation Commission, to permit the use of off-road vehicles on roads under their jurisdiction. This new authority does not apply to "limited access highways" such as interstate highways. Local governments and the State Transportation Commission may impose additional restrictions on off-road vehicle use beyond the existing minimum statutory requirements.

In 2015, Congress enacted a surface transportation statute titled the Fixing America's Surface Transportation Act, commonly referred to as the "FAST Act". The act includes several elements designed to promote growth in the use of vehicles fueled by natural gas, including a weight allowance on federal highways for shipping trucks that use these heavier fuel systems. House Bill 176 (Chapter 70) mirrors the FAST Act by creating a weight allowance for natural-gas-fueled vehicles operating on state roads.

Through the Older Americans Act of 1965, the federal government provides funding assistance for transportation services for senior citizens. The federal program specifically allows local entities that supply these services to accept donations from their passengers; however, the state's Motor Carrier Act could be interpreted as requiring entities that accept donations to be subject to the PRC's requirements for for-profit transportation businesses. Now, due to provisions in House Bill 252 (Chapter 58), transportation services that are subsidized by federal funding through the Older Americans Act of 1965 are exempted from the requirement to obtain operating authority from the PRC.

PROFESSIONAL AND OCCUPATIONAL LICENSURE

The shortage of licensed professionals working in the area of health care in New Mexico has been a concern voiced by legislators and constituents alike for many years, and the legislature took up the matter of professional licensure in an effort to ameliorate the situation and attract licensed health care professionals from out of state. Senate Bill 105 (Chapter 19) provides for expedited occupational and professional licensure for professionals in health-related fields whose licenses are issued by another jurisdiction in the United States and are current and in good standing, provided that the applicant has met the minimal licensing requirements that are substantially equivalent to the pertinent New Mexico licensing requirements.

PROPERTY

Three new statutes to come out of the session are designed to reduce the number of property and trustee issues that must be submitted to a court or litigated. Simple errors in property titles and trusts, such as misspellings or putting the incorrect address for a grantee, may now be corrected by filing a correction document with the county clerk's office. Also, in creating a will or trust, a donor now has greater flexibility to ensure the intent is carried out when future circumstances change in unforeseen ways.

Senate Bill 146 (Chapter 67) establishes a process for correcting technical errors in legal instruments such as mortgages and deeds affecting the title to real property. Under the new law, specifically designated people, such as the attorney who drafted the deed or a title insurer, may execute a "scrivener's-error affidavit" to make a valid correction. The bill includes a standardized form that eligible affiants may use for the purpose.

The other two statutes were developed by the Uniform Law Commission, an organization that drafts legislation in areas where it is believed that having the same, or substantially similar, laws from state to state is desirable. With the enactment of House Bill 280 (Chapter 72), New Mexico becomes the first state to adopt the Uniform Trust Decanting Act. Similar to decanting a beverage from one container into another, decanting property is a mechanism for distributing irrevocable trust assets into a second trust. The mechanism can be used to overcome problems arising from unforeseen, changed circumstances that render an original trust's terms incompatible with the grantor's intent. How these cases are currently handled varies from state to state, and some states have left the entire issue up to their court systems. The Uniform Trust Decanting Act establishes statutory requirements for decanting, including the required notice to beneficiaries and the levels of flexibility a grantor may establish for a trustee to change the direction of a trust. The bill also revises, in the context of the statutory rule against perpetuities, the terms that govern the distribution of real property held in trust.

Senate Bill 155 (Chapter 69) adds the Uniform Powers of Appointment Act to the state's roster of uniform laws. The act codifies an "appointment" option in estate planning. In exercising the option, rather than naming specific beneficiaries to receive the donor's property, a donor grants a "powerholder", or appointed person, the authority to use discretion in distributing the property. Borrowing heavily from existing common law on the subject, the uniform act outlines the creation and exercise of a grant of power and governs claims to property.

PUBLIC OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

Enacted legislation pertaining to public officers and employees includes amendments to the Public Employees Retirement Act and public employer group insurance provisions in law. Under the provisions of House Bill 43 (Chapter 39), during the period of workers' compensation leave necessitated by an injury incurred in the line of duty by a public safety employee who is subject to the Public Employees Retirement Association, the employer is obligated to pay both the employer's and the employee's group insurance contributions. For a public safety employee covered and retaining membership under particular member plans, the employee will accrue, and the employer will pay both the employer and employee's member contributions for, retirement service credit if the employer certifies to the Public Employees Retirement Association that the injury was incurred in an inherently dangerous location or under inherently dangerous circumstances.

REGULATION AND LICENSING

Consumer protection is a critical function of New Mexico's Regulation and Licensing Department, with the Financial Institutions Division safeguarding consumer rights and promoting sound services in the realm of finance and economics. House Bill 250 (Chapter 88) enhances consumer protection and brings New Mexico in line with other border states by enacting the Uniform Money Services Act. The act directs the Financial Institutions Division to oversee and enforce standardized licensure requirements for individuals and their delegates who engage in money transmission, check cashing or currency exchange businesses. It also imposes disclosure, examination and security requirements, in addition to increased oversight and penalties, to strengthen the regulation of these financial services and help detect fraud and prevent abuse.

STATE GOVERNMENT

Most of the bills addressing state government that passed during the session concern divestment of property, with parcels in various counties approved either for transfer to other governmental entities or for outright sale. Other related measures allow for design-build contracts on certain highway projects and, in one legislative chamber, lift a prohibition against archiving webcasts.

Legislature

Beginning with the 2009 session, the legislature has taken steps to increase transparency and public access to session and committee proceedings through webcasting. Until now, however, the rules enacted by both chambers to allow webcasting included a prohibition against archiving the webcasts.

House Resolution 1 amends House Rules 9-5-8 and 23-8-1 to allow archiving of house webcasts for five years.

Property

When a state entity wishes to divest itself of real property valued at more than $100,000, statute requires that it obtain legislative approval for the sale or transfer of that property. The legislature approved several real property transfers to various local entities during the session, each with the provision that the property will revert to the state at no cost if it is no longer needed by the local entity.

Senate Joint Resolution 9 and House Joint Resolution 17, which are identical, grant legislative approval for transfers of two tracts of state land to the Village of Los Lunas. One tract, known as the "Don Pasqual" real property, was previously leased by the village for its administrative offices, a road maintenance yard and other public uses. The other tract, known as the "Highway 314" real property, was also leased by Los Lunas, together with the Los Lunas Public School District and Valencia County, for public uses. The joint resolutions specify that the school district and county may continue to use the Highway 314 real property under village ownership.

A third tract of state land in Los Lunas is the subject of Senate Joint Resolution 10, which approves transfer of land located at the corner of State Road 314 and Morris Road to Valencia County. The land is the site of the Valencia County courthouse.

House Joint Resolution 15 and Senate Joint Resolution 13, which are identical, address the transfer of a tract of state land to the City of Las Vegas. The state has determined that it does not need the property, which is located at 301 Mills Avenue. Under city ownership, the property will be used for city offices and governmental functions.

The legislature also approved, through House Joint Resolution 21 and Senate Joint Resolution 19, the sale of property in Artesia owned by the Pecos Valley Regional Education Cooperative. These resolutions are discussed in the Education section.

Procurement

House Bill 206 (Chapter 86) and Senate Bill 215 (Chapter 85) are duplicate bills that amend the Procurement Code to allow the use of design and build project delivery for road and highway projects that use federal-aid highway funds. The design-build form of project delivery requires one entity to perform both architectural/engineering services and construction under one contract. This delivery method is common for large projects and often leads to faster, more reliable project completion times and more accurate budget performance.

TAXATION

Few tax-related bills made it through the 2016 session, likely due to concerns surrounding a limited budget and the lack of desire to raise revenue through tax measures. However, some tax-related bills did make it through, including tax administration bills and bills that benefit certain utilities, including both in-state nonprofit cooperatives and out-of-state commercial utilities.

The tax administration bills include House Bill 242 (Chapter 87), which delays the expiration of a .046% distribution of gross receipts tax revenue to the State Aviation Fund from June 30, 2018 to June 30, 2021, and Senate Bill 211 (Chapter 77), which conforms statutory references and makes minor technical corrections in the Film Production Tax Credit Act. To conform with changes made to federal law regarding income tax due dates, House Bill 249 (Chapter 15) changes the due date for filing a return and paying a tax under the Income Tax Act and the Corporate Income and Franchise Tax Act. Taxpayers are now required to file and pay on or before the due date of the taxpayer's federal return.

The tax measures that concern utilities include Senate Bill 19 (Chapter 59), which provides exemptions from income tax, corporate income tax, gross receipts tax, compensating tax and property tax, as well as from certain licensing requirements, to out-of-state businesses and individuals who respond to certain declared disasters or emergencies. The exemptions are limited to those who perform work on critical infrastructure, primarily utilities, and do not extend to those who perform work on other types of disasters, such as environmental contamination or wildfires. The other utility-related bill, Senate Bill 47 (Chapter 49), clarifies that the cost of property contributed to a utility on behalf of a ratepayer for the transmission or distribution of electric power by that utility, or what could be known as a "contribution in aid of construction", is not subject to valuation for property tax purposes.
