Introduction

“I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat.”

— Sir Winston S. Churchill

There was much effort, but little pleasure, in the work of the second session of the forty-sixth legislature. Contentiousness and acrimony seemed to await at every turn.

Few issues were without controversy and prolonged debate, and disagreements among legislators and between legislators and the governor over certain policies added to the tension. The fact that legislators had met just months earlier in a special session on tax reform, sex offenders and highway financing exacerbated the strain.

The issues presented were legion. A proposal to repeal the tax on most food while raising the tax on other goods and services in cities was at the center of much of the controversy, leading to late-night floor sessions, parliamentary maneuvering and impassioned and dramatic floor speeches. Also sparking considerable debate were the ultimately successful measures to raise funds for medicaid by taxing nursing homes, add staff at the governor’s official residence and correct a technical problem in a one-year-old law prohibiting job discrimination based on sexual preference. Proposals that failed to win approval — such as consolidating public employee health care plans, requiring ignition interlock devices on all vehicles and establishing safety standards for all-terrain vehicles — also contributed to the work and the pressure.

Even a delay in the signing of the enrolled and engrossed copy of the general appropriation act by the lieutenant governor, which prevented the legislation from reaching the governor in time to require him to act upon it while the legislature was still in session, triggered objections from some legislators.

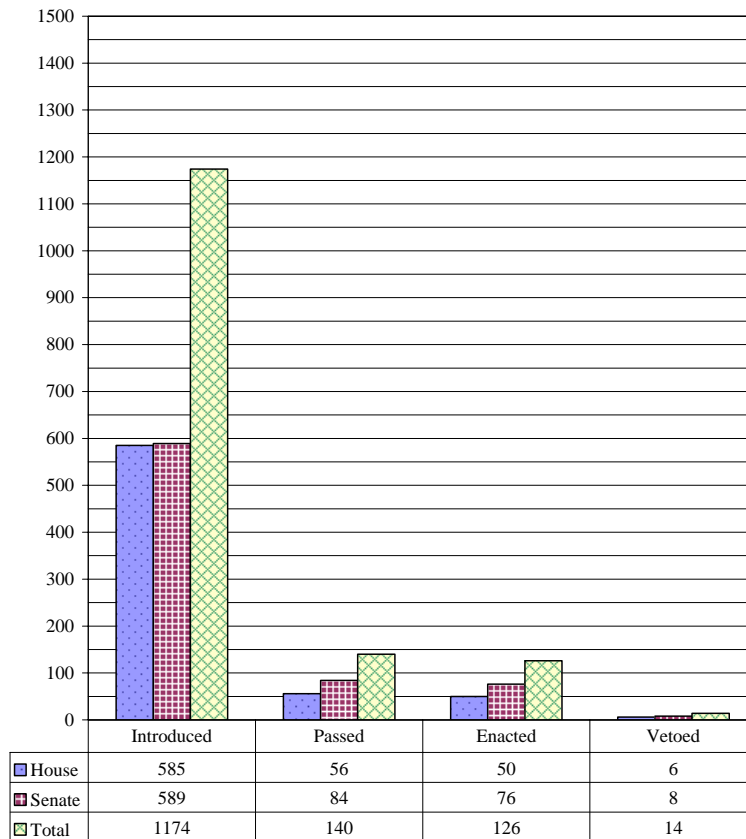

Some grumbling about the executive’s style behind closed doors erupted publicly during the session. After the session, the governor vetoed tens of millions of dollars worth of capital outlay projects — an action some asserted was targeted at projects sponsored by the governor’s harshest critics, while others said was simply the first step in his proposed capital outlay reform.

All of this in a 30-day session that the constitution contemplated would be limited to budgetary matters, a notion that was erased by the record number (288) of special messages granted by the governor introducing legislation.

The apparent acrimony was in contrast to the fact that this session was one of the most productive in years. The legislature approved 140 bills, a typical number for a short session, while the governor vetoed only 14 — the lowest number of regular session vetoes since 1994. The food tax was repealed, the budget was approved, capital improvements were funded, DWI legislation was enacted, methamphetamine laws were strengthened and a host of other measures were debated and approved.

The Highlights is an annual publication of the legislative council service summarizing much, though not all, of the legislation approved during the session. Omission of certain bills is not an indication that those bills are not important; any bill introduced and passed is important to someone. Just as the selection of bills for inclusion in the Highlights is subjective, so also are the decisions of where to place them. Many bills defy single-topic categorization, and the staff has tried to adequately organize and cross-reference them. A listing of all bills that passed, whether included here or not, appears in the Concordance in Appendix F.

Bill Action Summary Regular Session 2004

FORTY-SIXTH LEGISLATURE
SECOND SESSION, 2004

AGING AND LONG-TERM SERVICES

With the aging population projected to expand dramatically over the next two decades, advocates for the elderly have been working for years to attract more attention and resources for this group. Acknowledging the need for coordinated services for the elderly as well as for others who require long-term care, the governor signed an executive order in 2003 that elevated the former state agency on aging to cabinet-level status. In the 2004 regular session, the legislature passed enabling legislation for the new aging and long-term services department (see the State Government, Reorganization section for a description of this bill). In addition to this success on behalf of the elderly, this year's lone consumer protection effort for nursing home patients — Senate Bill 401 (Chapter 53), commonly referred to during deliberations as the "grannycam bill" — garnered only a single negative vote in both houses on final passage and represents a major step in protecting this population. The law permits these patients or their surrogate decision-makers to install monitoring devices, including visual recording devices, in their nursing home rooms and requires such facilities to inform patients that they may do so. Regulations for such procedures will be developed by the aging and long-term services department and monitored by that agency's state long-term care ombudsman program.

AGRICULTURE, LIVESTOCK AND DOMESTIC ANIMALS

Legislation passed during the 2004 session concerning agriculture, livestock and domestic animals in fact touched on a broader range of issues than those topics might suggest, from bills affecting agency operations and revenue sources to a bill calling for humane treatment of animals when they are euthanised. The legislature also acknowledged the public's expanding interest in certified organic foods by passing a bill centered on the operations of the organic commodity commission (OCC).

While production of organically certified food is anticipated to increase dramatically in the coming years, current revenue to the OCC has hampered the agency's ability to meet certain statutory requirements. House Bill 203 (Chapter 64) amends the Organic Commodity Act to increase revenue potential for the OCC, conform the state certification program with the national organic certification program of the United States department of agriculture, establish a fee for private certifiers, allow for competitive certification fees for large producers and make certain technical adjustments to language in the act. The OCC was recently authorized to certify organic food producers for eligibility to export products to European markets, but this authority was conditioned on all commission members becoming certified by an independent certifier. The bill provides for this certification and for a new range of inspection fees that will increase revenues to the OCC from $15,000 to $50,000 annually.

Another agency revenue source affected by legislation in this session is the livestock board operating fund, which is the primary source of revenue for the New Mexico livestock board and which is expected to be depleted by July 2005. House Bill 205 (Chapter 26) gives the board the flexibility to raise brand fees to cover its operating expenses, amounting to an increase of about $1.4 million. Fees that the board may increase include those on brand transfers, new brands and brand renewals, as well as fees for certified copies of brands.

Rounding out this section is an anti-cruelty bill that addresses the practice of euthanasia at animal control services or facilities, animal shelters and humane societies. Senate Bill 51 (Chapter 35) prohibits the use of intra-cardiac injection as a means of administering euthanasia to a conscious animal and makes the act a misdemeanor.

APPROPRIATIONS AND FINANCE

Key areas of the 2004 budget deliberations included providing additional money for public schools, including support for education reform initiatives as required by the constitutional amendment in 2003 that increased the distribution of funds from the permanent fund, and developing a sustainable funding plan for support of the ever-growing medicaid program and the state children's health insurance program. In addition, priorities for capital funding were subject to considerable negotiation between the legislature and the governor, who had called for an overhaul of the state's capital outlay system to improve capital planning, project selection and program administration. In the end, additional money was provided to the department of finance and administration (DFA) for capital program administration, and the governor agreed to continue working with the legislature on capital planning issues.

As in the past, limited growth in general fund revenues forced hard choices in the budget area. Going into the session, recurring revenues for fiscal year 2005 were forecast to increase by only 2.4 percent, of which approximately one-half reflected the additional money for public schools resulting from the constitutional amendment. A mid-session revenue revision added approximately $43 million, or 0.3 percent in growth, to fiscal year 2005 revenues, with most of the additional money reflecting stronger oil and gas prices. Relatively strong growth in fiscal year 2004 revenues also resulting primarily from high oil and gas prices, in addition to a $284 million adjustment to revenues resulting from the implementation of full accrual accounting practices as required by national accounting standards, resulted in a one-time revenue gain that provided current-year revenues that could be appropriated for capital projects and other nonrecurring programs while still maintaining adequate year-end reserve levels.

Revenue

A number of changes to state tax revenues, including a revenue-neutral bill that removed the gross receipts tax on food and certain medical services while removing the credit allowed municipalities and two revenue-raising bills intended to augment the revenues available for support of the state medicaid program, were among the most significant revenue measures enacted this year (these bills are described in the Taxation section). In addition to these specific tax measures, the legislature provided funding in the general appropriation act for additional audit and compliance staff at the taxation and revenue department to ensure that the department could collect an additional $25 million per year in general fund taxes, and this amount was added to the general fund revenue estimates. A similar enhanced tax compliance initiative funded during the 2003 legislative session is credited with providing over $30 million of additional revenue to the general fund.

A few other notable revenue measures were passed during the session, including Senate Bill 125 (Chapter 120, p.v.), which addresses funding issues for the office of natural resources trustee. This bill authorizes the trustee to expend money from the natural resources trustee fund for specified purposes and also authorizes the legislature to appropriate money from the fund to cover the general operating expenses of carrying out the purposes of the Natural Resources Trustee Act. The bill also provides that money in the fund shall be retained rather than transferred to the game protection fund, and it cancels the obligation to reimburse the general fund for the start-up costs of the office of natural resources trustee. The governor vetoed house energy and natural resources committee amendatory language that would have permitted direct judicial appeal of decisions of the trustee.

Senate Bill 87 (Chapter 85) creates the acequia project fund, which will be used to make grants to acequias for projects approved by the legislature. The bill makes it possible for money to be donated or appropriated to the fund, which will be administered by the New Mexico finance authority (NMFA). No money, however, was appropriated to the fund in this bill.

A final revenue bill, Senate Bill 316 (Chapter 14), affects the manner in which the severance tax permanent fund may be invested. Specifically, the range of permitted real estate investments is broadened and the permitted percentage in real estate investments raised from three percent to 10 percent of the fund. Furthermore, money from the fund may now be invested to a limited extent in so-called “hedge funds” that meet specified conditions. Section 1 of the bill, which had applied these revised investment guidelines to the land grant permanent funds, failed to get the constitutionally required three-fourths’ vote of the members elected to the senate and did not become law.

Appropriations

This year, the governor partially vetoed House Bill 1 (Ch. 1, p.v.), known as the “Feed Bill”, which includes all funding for legislative session operations and legislative permanent staffing and interim committee operations. He vetoed the personal services and employee benefits funding for the legislative finance committee, calling the committee’s cost proposal to expand its audit function by two FTEs unacceptable. By the last week of the session, the appropriation was fully restored in the General Appropriation Act of 2004 (House Appropriations and Finance Committee Substitute for House Bills 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8 and 177 (Ch. 114, p.v.)) (HB 2), and it was not vetoed again.

Before the session ended, the legislature made sufficient changes to the revenue and tax structures to yield a general fund recurring revenue forecast of 4.2 percent for fiscal year 2005, enough to fund state government operations and to maintain responsible operating reserves. HB 2 appropriates nearly $11.5 billion from all revenue sources for state government operations and special appropriations for fiscal years 2004 and 2005. Legislators designated $4.4 billion in general fund for regular operations during fiscal year 2005 and $100 million in general fund for nonrecurring supplemental and special appropriations for fiscal year 2004. Tables 1-3 and Charts 1-3 in Appendix B provide detailed information about HB 2 appropriations, along with other general fund appropriations made in other bills; Tables 4-6 of the same appendix list the various revenue bills enacted.

HB 2 did not escape the governor’s veto pen. More than $14.5 million in direct general fund appropriations was vetoed, along with another $4.7 million in information technology appropriations for state government operations. Total vetoes from all revenue sources were approximately $22.5 million. A list of vetoes can be found in Table 3 of Appendix B.

GENERAL FUND APPROPRIATIONS
Fiscal Year 2005
$4,382,766,400

Total general fund appropriations for public schools exceed $2 billion, with most of them projected as recurring operational costs. These general fund appropriations are coupled with an additional $350 million of federal revenue. Overall, public schools received 45.5 percent of all fiscal year 2005 general fund appropriations, excluding an additional $22 million in capital outlay. In other supplemental and additional non-capital appropriations for fiscal year 2004, public schools received nearly $15 million, or 40 percent more than higher education and 100 percent more than health and human services agencies. All public school employees will receive a two percent salary increase in fiscal year 2005; the legislature authorized $8.6 million to fund the second year of the five-year phase-in of the three-tiered teacher licensure system; and level-two teachers will receive a minimum annual salary of $35,000. Finally, because of the successful passage of last year's constitutional amendment for funding educational reforms, the legislature set aside an additional projected $120 million in the state's appropriation contingency fund in fiscal year 2004 for implementing and maintaining education reforms adopted by the legislature. Clearly, this was a very successful legislative session for public schools in New Mexico.

Health and human services agencies received the next largest portion of general fund appropriations for fiscal year 2005, exceeding $1 billion or 23 percent of all appropriations for government operations. This equates to a nearly 9.5 percent increase in general fund dollars above the fiscal year 2004 operating budgets for these services. Several proposals to reduce or control medicaid costs were incorporated in the budget policies adopted in HB 2, to be implemented by the appropriate executive agencies. Supplemental and additional non-capital fiscal year appropriations for health and human services agencies totaled nearly $7 million, far more than other governmental agencies received.

The judiciary and higher education agencies maintained the same proportion of appropriations from the total budget pie for 2005 operations as they received for 2004; however, increases in funding for health and human services drove down the proportionate share of funding for public schools by 0.4 percent, public safety by 0.4 percent and general government by 0.2 percent.

Due to a higher than usual amount of nonrecurring general fund revenue in fiscal year 2004, attributable in part to the change in governmental accrual accounting, the legislature chose to fund additional appropriations within HB 2 rather than through a separate supplemental appropriation act. Nearly $100 million was appropriated to fund specific items throughout government, including:

- (1) $25 million to address water adjudications, compliance with federal mandates relating to water and the purchase of land and water rights;
- (2) more than $13.3 million to the public schools for expanded education programming, professional development, information technology and the three-tiered licensure evaluation system;
- (3) $10 million to higher education institutions to address water conservation, restoration and revegetation near the Canadian and Pecos rivers and the Rio Grande; for a hepatitis C virus education and treatment pilot project; and for continuation or expansion of several other university programs statewide;
- (4) $4.9 million to increase the number of persons served statewide by the developmental disabilities and the disabled and elderly medicaid waiver programs;
- (5) funding for domestic violence shelters, sexual offender treatment programs and crime laboratory analysis;
- (6) funding for expansion of state parks;
- (7) industrial development training program funds totaling $6 million;

- (8) $2.5 million for the enhancement of tax collection efforts;
- (9) funding for the temporary assistance for needy families block grant;
- (10) $1.5 million to the tourism department for advertising to attract visitors to the state; and
- (11) funding for dozens of other governmental programs serving New Mexicans.

Fiscal year 2004 supplemental and deficiency general fund appropriations of $5.1 million were approved to address shortfalls in government budgets, primarily for health and human services agencies and public education, thus reaffirming the legislature's commitment to fund the critical needs of its constituency. In addition, the legislature adopted numerous extensions of time for $70 million of prior year appropriations detailed in Table 2 of Appendix B, including:

- (1) $25 million in Section 8 in prior year data processing appropriations; and
- (2) $45 million in Section 5 for various projects.

The legislature passed a salary increase, effective at the start of the new fiscal year for all state employees, providing a two percent increase for faculty and staff of four- and two-year post-secondary educational institutions; a five percent increase for commissioned state police officers; a six percent increase for judges; and a two percent increase for the remainder of state government employees. Legislators also took action to address the growing cost of insurance coverage for state employees by changing the current brackets for employer contributions (see the Public Officers and Employees section for a description of this bill) and appropriating $2 million in HB 2 to fund an increase in the employer's share of contributions for certain employees.

Finally, the legislature provided transfer authority for an amount not exceeding $40 million — approximately one percent of the fiscal year 2004 budget — from the general fund operating reserve should revenues and transfers in that fiscal year be insufficient to meet appropriations.

New Mexico Finance Authority

The Behavioral Health Capital Funding Act, enacted into law by Senate Bill 248 (Chapter 71), allows the NMFA to make loans to certain nonprofit behavioral health facilities that primarily serve the sick and indigent. The behavioral health capital fund is created in the NMFA, which is authorized to make loans from the fund for capital projects to eligible entities, although no money was appropriated to the fund during this session. The provisions of the act will be administered by the NMFA and the department of health.

House Bill 124 (Chapter 61) authorizes the NMFA to make loans from the public project revolving fund for 134 specified public projects throughout the state (see Table 7 in Appendix B for a list of those projects). Just over $1.6 million from the public project revolving fund is appropriated to the drinking water state revolving loan fund by House Bill 100 (Chapter 91), which will allow the release of several million dollars in federal matching funds. Twenty-five projects previously authorized to receive public project revolving fund loans were deauthorized by Senate Bill 201 (Chapter 102), and House Bill 200 (Chapter 83) authorizes the NMFA to make grants for 153 water and wastewater projects from the water and wastewater project grant fund, though no new appropriations were made to the fund.

Capital Outlay

The legislature passed two capital outlay bills during this session, which are detailed thoroughly in Appendix C — House Taxation and Revenue Committee Substitute for House Bill 293 (Chapter 126, p.v.) and the general obligation bond bill, House Taxation and Revenue Committee Substitute for House Bill 294 (Chapter 117, p.v.) (see the Appropriations and Finance, New Mexico Finance Authority section for further details on these bills). Both bills were signed into law, but the governor wielded his veto pen sharply on Chapter 126, indicating in his veto message that his decisions were based on the “long overdue reform of the capital outlay system” and that his vetoes allow for investing “in our most urgent priorities”. Vetoes totaled $24,191,742. In a joint effort by the legislature and the executive, the capital outlay bill does, indeed, invest in the state’s most urgent priorities: schools, water, higher education and community development projects.

This year, the severance tax bonding capacity was larger than in most years, with an eventual 972 projects funded through the severance tax bonding fund for a total amount of $117,214,183. Chapter 126 also appropriates $164,460,851 from the general fund to the capital projects fund, representing 1,846 projects. As has been true for many previous legislative sessions, the number of capital requests written far outweighed the eventual number funded. This year, the legislature introduced 2,475 requests, representing 4,398 projects. The total amount of introduced requests was $1,597,535,966 (see Table 11 in Appendix C for a list of projects).

Several other funds were tapped in the capital outlay bill for statewide improvements, including $350,000 from the state lands maintenance fund, $525,000 from the state capitol maintenance fund, $60,000 from the New Mexico irrigation works construction fund, $1 million from the state road fund and $32 million from the public school capital outlay fund. Money was appropriated from the capital projects fund to the public buildings repair fund to make improvements to 22 state buildings in the amount of $7,320,000. Short-term severance tax bonds in the amount of $10 million were appropriated to the DFA for the statewide human resources, accounting and management project and for the public school capital outlay fund to provide grant assistance for continuation projects and to correct deficiencies pursuant to the Public School Capital Outlay Act.

Four questions regarding general obligation bonds will be presented for approval by the voters at the general election in November 2004. The topics for the questions and amounts, including the cost of issuing the bonds, are:

- (1) senior citizen facility improvements and construction, $6,063,000;
- (2) higher educational capital improvements and acquisitions, $94,892,000;

- (3) public library acquisitions, $16,315,000; and
- (4) kindergarten classroom construction and renovation, $5,100,000.

BUSINESS, FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS AND INSURANCE

A great deal of legislation impacting businesses, financial institutions and the insurance industry was introduced during the 2004 legislative session; however, very few measures were approved by the legislature and signed by the governor. Many of the bills that might be included in this topic also fell under other topics discussed in the Highlights, as seen in the extensive list of cross references in the Related Bills portion at the end of this section. While there was no particular theme that would encapsulate the content of the bills affecting business, financial institutions and insurance that were sponsored this year, several bills described below did correct errors or reconcile multiple amendments to the same section of law made in 2003.

House Bill 471 (Chapter 89) requires contractors and subcontractors that submit bids for public works contracts valued at $50,000 or more to register with the labor and industrial division of the labor department and pay an annual fee of $200. The bill also creates a nonreverting labor enforcement fund into which these fees are deposited that may be used by the department to defray the costs of administering and enforcing the Public Works Minimum Wage Act.

Banking institutions involved in loans for manufactured homes and home improvements indicated reservations about their continued involvement in this market because of the potential liability imposed by a certain provision of the Home Loan Protection Act. Senate Bill 228 (Chapter 13) repeals a provision in the act that had permitted a person who has taken out a loan for the purchase of a manufactured home or for home improvements to assert against a creditor or holder of the loan all affirmative claims and defenses that the borrower may have against the seller of the mobile home or home improvement contractor. The repeal of this provision will effectively restore the market for manufactured home and home improvement loans.

Annual reporting requirements for securities licensees are eliminated with the passage of Senate Bill 152 (Chapter 79).

Two bills were signed into law in the area of insurance. House Bill 240 (Chapter 5) creates the insurance operations fund to receive distributions from the insurance department suspense fund attributable to fees charged for insurers' certificates of authority and agents' licenses and appointments. At the end of each fiscal year, the balance in the insurance operations fund that is greater than 50 percent of that year's appropriation will revert to the general fund. Senate Bill 502 (Chapter 122) imposes a health insurance premium surtax of one percent of gross health insurance premiums and membership and policy fees, in addition to the existing premium tax of 3.003 percent. The bill includes an applicability section to resolve an effective date issue specific to the revisions in Laws 2003, Chapter 58. Additionally, this bill mandates health insurance coverage for alpha-fetoprotein IV screening tests for pregnant women and circumcision for newborn males.

CHILDREN, YOUTH AND FAMILIES

After passing many bills in 2003 that amended provisions within the Children's Code, the legislature in 2004 enacted relatively few laws that directly affect children. One bill, which expands the definition of child abuse as it relates to a child's proximity to ingredients or equipment used in the manufacture of controlled substances, is described fully in the Criminal Law, Corrections and Courts section. The remaining bills address issues of child support and inheritance.

Child support owed to or collected by the human services department now has priority over all other liens established by the department on lottery winnings with the passage of Senate Bill 558 (Chapter 40). The bill gives the department 90 days to institute any necessary administrative seizure proceedings before a lottery prize payment is released to the winner. Prior to passage of this bill, the department had only 30 days to institute garnishment or wage-withholding proceedings before a prize was released.

Senate Judiciary Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 48 (Chapter 41) changes current law concerning the interest and statute of limitations on unpaid child support. Specifically, the bill changes the statute of limitations for filing paternity and unpaid child support claims to no later than 12 years after the birth of the child. The legislation also establishes an arrears management program to provide amnesty for unpaid child support interest and clarifies what entity is represented by child support enforcement division attorneys.

Senate Bill 499 (Chapter 72) amends existing intestate law governing an adopted child's right to inherit when the deceased has not left a will. The bill eliminates intestate succession rights between the child and the "severed" natural parent.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

During the 2003 regular legislative session, four constitutional amendments (CAs) were proposed by the legislature, and two of them were approved by the voters in a special election held in September of that year. The remaining two — CA 3, which would allow for municipal runoff elections, and CA 4, which would expand the property tax exemption currently allowed for certain veterans and their widows — will appear on the ballot at the general election in November 2004. That ballot will also contain CA 5, proposed by House Joint Resolution 5 in the 2004 legislative session. If approved by the electorate, CA 5 would amend Article 12, Section 11 of the constitution of New Mexico to change the name of the New Mexico school for the visually handicapped to the New Mexico school for the blind and visually impaired.

The legislative council service publishes an analysis of and arguments for and against proposed constitutional amendments prior to the election in which they appear on the ballot. The publication will be available in the summer of 2004.

CRIMINAL LAW, CORRECTIONS AND COURTS

The legislature primarily focused its attention on driving while intoxicated (DWI) issues as well as those attendant to the manufacture of controlled substances. In New Mexico and across the nation, the manufacture of controlled substances, particularly methamphetamines, has posed a new set of challenges for the criminal justice system.

House Judiciary Committee Substitute for Senate Judiciary Committee Substitute for Senate Bills 144 and 207 (Chapter 42) is the omnibus DWI bill that implements changes initially made to the criminal DWI statute during the 2003 regular legislative session (see House Judiciary Committee Substitute for House Bill 117 (HB 117) from 2003). The New Mexico court of appeals recently ruled that the governor's subsequent signature of another bill, which also amended the criminal DWI statute (see House Floor Substitute for House Bill 278 from 2003), effectively eliminated the amendments set forth in HB 117. The state has appealed the ruling of the court of appeals, and the legislature and the governor have filed a joint amicus curiae brief. The appeal is pending.

The 2004 bill, House Judiciary Committee Substitute for Senate Judiciary Committee Substitute for Senate Bills 144 and 207, addresses habitual DWI offenders with a mixture of punishment and treatment. Previously, upon a fourth or subsequent DWI conviction, a DWI offender was subject to a term of imprisonment of 18 months, six months of which was mandatory. Pursuant to this bill, the punishment for habitual DWI offenders is increased as follows: 1) upon a fifth conviction, a DWI offender shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of two years, one year of which is mandatory; 2) upon a sixth conviction, a DWI offender shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of 30 months, 18 months of which are mandatory; and 3) upon a seventh or subsequent conviction, a DWI offender shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of three years, two years of which are mandatory. The minimum mandatory sentence for a second conviction is increased to 96 consecutive hours. The bill also provides a sentencing court with express authority to punish a probation violator by imposing any sentence the court could have originally imposed.

For felony DWI offenders in the custody of the corrections department, the department is required to provide substance abuse counseling and treatment. Moreover, while a DWI offender is on probation or parole, the department shall provide the offender with substance abuse counseling and treatment or shall require the DWI offender to obtain counseling and treatment. Upon a second or third DWI conviction, an offender shall now be required to participate in and complete a substance abuse treatment program or a drug court program.

Finally, the bill increases the sentencing enhancement for a person who commits homicide by vehicle while DWI or great bodily harm by vehicle while DWI when that person has a prior DWI conviction. The sentencing enhancement is increased from two years to four years.

House Judiciary Committee Substitute for House Bill 487 (Chapter 43) increases the penalty for providing alcohol to a minor. Formerly a misdemeanor, the penalty is now a fourth degree felony.

Senate Bill 161 (Chapter 10) and House Bill 112 (Chapter 11) are identical bills that amend the criminal statute regarding child abuse. The bills state that evidence demonstrating that a child has been allowed to enter or remain in a motor vehicle, building or other premises that contains chemicals and equipment used or intended for use in the manufacture of a controlled substance shall be deemed prima facie evidence of abuse of the child. Consequently, the burden will be placed on the defendant to rebut that evidentiary finding.

House Judiciary Committee Substitute for House Bill 111 (Chapter 9) and Senate Judiciary Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 160 (Chapter 12) are identical bills that amend the Drug Precursor Act to give the board of pharmacy authority to add substances to the list of drug precursors. The bills set forth specific criteria to be considered by the board when it makes a determination whether to add a substance to the list of drug precursors. The bills also provide that a person who commits a prohibited act regarding drug precursors is guilty of a fourth degree felony.

Senate Bill 254 (Chapter 75) gives parolees who have been released from confinement, except sex offenders, an opportunity to earn meritorious deductions from a period of parole. If an offender is in compliance with all conditions of parole, the offender is eligible to be awarded earned meritorious deductions of up to 30 days per month — in other words, the offender may reduce his period of parole by half. The adult parole board provides final approval of the award of earned meritorious deductions, and the board may remove the deductions previously earned if the offender subsequently fails to comply with conditions of parole.

Senate Bill 563 (Chapter 38) increases the amount of payments made by supervised probationers and parolees for the services they receive. The bill also provides that payment of supervised probation or parole costs shall not be waived unless the court (for probationers) or parole board (for parolees) holds an evidentiary hearing and determines that the person is unable to pay the costs. Offenders who participate in a community corrections program and who receive services shall now be required to make a copayment to offset the cost of the services. The amount of the copayment will be based upon the offender's ability to pay. The corrections department will collect the copayments and remit them to the state treasurer for deposit in the community corrections grant fund.

On court-related matters, the legislature reviewed certain salaries within the supreme court and the court of appeals. Under current law, the chief justice of the supreme court and the chief judge of the court of appeals receive a small salary stipend for the additional duties required of the positions. Senate Bill 222 (Chapter 101) gives a similar stipend to all district court chief judges, the chief judge of the Bernalillo county metropolitan court and certain presiding judges in magistrate courts with three or more judges. The bill also increases the member contributions of the judicial and magistrate retirement acts by one-half percent to 5.5 percent.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

The legislature attempted to encourage economic growth in clean energy industries and in the small business sector by taking steps to establish a clean energy grants program and by clarifying language in the Small Business Investment Act. A bill aimed at retaining military installations, which have been a strong economic presence in the state for generations, is described in the Military and Veterans Affairs section, and a bill that stimulates the creation of high-wage jobs is described in the Taxation section.

The legislature enacted the Advanced Energy Technologies Economic Development Act in House Bill 251 (Chapter 55) with the goal of attracting manufacturing facilities, assisting new business start-ups and creating jobs in clean energy. The bill directs the energy, minerals and natural resources department to establish a clean energy grants program and creates the clean energy grants fund, although $1,500,000 intended for the fund was stripped from the bill. If the grants program obtains funding, the bill provides that grants may be made to local and state governments, Indian tribes and pueblos, universities and public schools for clean energy education, technical assistance and training projects, with the limitation that no single entity may receive more than $100,000 for any single project. The bill also limits the department's costs for administration, research and studies to $100,000. In addition to the appropriation intended for the clean energy grants fund, the original bill had also included a $500,000 appropriation for the economic development department to implement a hydrogen and fuel cell development program; however, this too was stricken from the bill. The bill was an outgrowth of House Joint Memorial 6 and Senate Joint Memorial 89 of the 2003 legislature, which outlined a plan to establish New Mexico as a national leader in hydrogen and fuel cell commercialization and clean energy programs.

House Bill 387 (Chapter 57) amends both the Small Business Investment Act and the Severance Tax Bonding Act. By clarifying language pertaining to restrictions on investments in pooled funds and amending and adding definitions, the bill enhances the ability of the New Mexico small business investment corporation to promote business development through expansion of businesses funded through the severance tax permanent fund.

EDUCATION

As usual, there was much activity in the area of education in both the public schools and higher education; however, out of 186 public-school-related bills introduced, fewer than 40 passed. This year, in particular, saw a focus on state-level governance of public schools with the enactment of the Public Education Department Act and with the ongoing struggle over the chartering authority and autonomy of charter schools. Even in higher education, many of the bills were focused on public schools, notably on providing teacher preparation and professional development. Also of interest were numerous bills with measures to make changes to lottery scholarship eligibility, but none of those bills passed.

Public Schools

At the special election in September 2003, the voters amended the constitution of New Mexico to change the way public education is governed at the state level. The constitutional change provided for a cabinet-level public education department (PED) and an elected public education commission (PEC), and the legislature was required to enact enabling legislation. House Bill 96 (Chapter 27) enacts the Public Education Department Act and amends the Public School Code to comply with those changes. The debate on this bill was over the role of the PEC, and the final version has the PEC advising and consulting with the secretary of public education.

New Mexico has a high dropout rate, fueled in part by its high truancy rates. House Judiciary Committee Substitute for House Bill 106 (Chapter 28) attempts to make skipping school less attractive. School districts must maintain attendance policies that provide for early identification of and intervention for unexcused absences. Public schools will no longer be able to use out-of-school suspension and expulsion as punishments for truancy. Penalties against the parents of truants remain the same, but the legislature has added a new penalty that should get students' attention. On the first finding of habitual truancy, a student's driver's license may be suspended for up to 90 days; on a subsequent finding of habitual truancy, the student's license could be suspended for up to one year.

The Deaf and Hard-of-Hearing Children's Educational Bill of Rights is enacted by House Bill 186 (Chapter 107) and its duplicate, Senate Bill 206 (Chapter 111). The act, as its title indicates, provides for an educational delivery system for deaf and hard-of-hearing children that includes early intervention, early childhood and K-12 programs and that is tailored to their special educational needs.

Substantial revisions to House Education Committee Substitute for House Bill 304 (Chapter 30) were made during its passage, and, in the end, language was added describing a licensure system for educational assistants to be implemented by department rule. The law provides a minimum salary of $12,000, effective in the 2004-2005 school year, and allows for that salary to be adjusted in accordance with appropriations in each school year. Also on the topic of licensure and in a change from last year's education reform bill, Senate Bill 149 (Chapter 92) requires substitute teacher licenses to be issued by the PED rather than by the school districts.

House Bill 522 (Chapter 29) amends the section in the Public School Code on graduation requirements to require students at the end of eighth through eleventh grades to prepare next-step plans that set forth the coursework to be followed until graduation. If a student's next-step plan changes, the change shall be approved by the student, the parent and the school guidance counselor or other appropriate school official. The PED is required to promulgate rules and establish specific accountability standards for this requirement. The section was further amended to require the PED to establish a procedure for students to be awarded credit through completion of specified career technical education courses for certain graduation requirements.

Senate Bill 138 (Chapter 31) changes the Assessment and Accountability Act to eliminate the individual writing assessment in grades three through nine in favor of using writing assessment scoring criteria applied to the extended-response portion of the new language arts criterion-referenced tests. While the change will save money, accountability experts believe that it has an educational advantage as well and that it will provide better longitudinal data about writing performance. The eleventh grade writing test will have to be developed.

Major amendments were made to the Bilingual Multicultural Education Act in Senate Bill 471 (Chapter 32), including the addition of greater accountability measures to track bilingual multicultural education program funds. Changes also provide for training for parents in English or in the home language to help their children succeed in school and for multicultural professional development for school district employees. In addition, the act now requires that each school district create a standardized bilingual multicultural education program curriculum.

Public School Finance

As a technical correction for a bill passed last year, House Bill 158 (Chapter 60) changes the basis for calculating the amount of a school district's or charter school's excess cash balance that may be used as a credit in determining the state equalization guarantee.

Post-Secondary Education

House Bill 142 (Chapter 6) requires New Mexico state university to establish an agricultural building repair and maintenance fund to take care of repairs and maintenance at the agricultural experiment stations and other off-campus agriculture-related facilities.

Senate Bill 163 (Chapter 84) allows northern New Mexico state school to develop and implement a baccalaureate degree program in teacher education at its Española campus. The program will be authorized when it has been developed and is ready for implementation and when it is ready for the accreditation review team from the appropriate accrediting agency. Northern New Mexico state school is expected to partner with New Mexico highlands university in developing the program.

Public School Capital Outlay

Senate Finance Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 399 (Chapter 125) encompasses the recommendations of the public school capital outlay task force, which was appointed in response to the Zuni lawsuit concerning funding of public school facilities. In addition to substantive changes described below under the subtopics Funding, Grant Award Process, Maintenance and Recalcitrant Districts, the bill makes technical changes to the law regarding the public school capital outlay process. It also re-creates the task force, whose statutory authority had expired as of January 1, 2004, until June 30, 2005 and specifies its continuing duties and staff support.

Funding

The legislation addresses funding issues in four areas: 1) it provides a $57 million authorization for additional short-term supplemental severance tax bonds to be used for completing projects that were partially funded by the public school capital outlay council (PSCOC) in September 2003 under the critical capital outlay program (“continuation projects”) and for making grants for correcting previously identified health and safety deficiencies; 2) it raises the limit for issuance of supplemental severance tax bonds effective July 1, 2005 from 87.5 percent to 95 percent of prior year severance tax revenues as a way to strengthen the long-term funding for public school capital outlay; 3) it extends by a year the dates for awarding funds under the deficiencies correction program to July 1, 2005 and for expending funds to July 1, 2007, and it makes corresponding date changes to previous appropriations of funds for deficiencies correction; and 4) it authorizes up to $4 million to be expended annually for five years (fiscal years 2005 through 2009) for grants to school districts for lease payments for classroom facilities, including facilities leased by charter schools.

Grant Award Process

The legislation clarifies and expands the duties and authority of the PSCOC and the public school facilities authority (PSFA) in terms of administering the public school capital outlay program. It clarifies the purpose of the Public School Capital Outlay Act; requires the council to give priority to funding continuation projects for three years beginning July 1, 2004 and provides that these projects shall be funded up to the adequacy standards regardless of any deviation from the adequacy standards; allows funds to be granted, using criteria other than the adequacy standards, in an emergency in which the health or safety of students or school personnel is at immediate risk or in which there is a threat of significant property damage; and provides an appeals process to the council for a school district that disagrees with a recommendation or action of the PSFA. The legislation also authorizes the PSFA to purchase portable classrooms to be loaned to school districts to meet a temporary requirement and to assist school districts in analyzing and assessing space utilization options.

Maintenance

The Public School Capital Improvements Act, commonly referred to as “SB 9”, is amended to allow SB 9 funds to be used for technical training and certification for maintenance and facilities management personnel and to require that school districts give priority to maintenance when spending state funds provided under SB 9. In addition, the state guarantee amount of $50.00 per unit per mill and the state minimum amount of $5.00 per unit per mill will be indexed to inflation beginning in fiscal year 2006.

Recalcitrant Districts

In terms of new statutory authority, perhaps the most significant provisions are those relating to what are called “recalcitrant districts”. Chapter 125 authorizes the PSCOC to bring a court action against a school district when it determines that the school district has a school facility that is so inadequate that the facility or the education received by students attending the facility is below the minimum standard required by the constitution of New Mexico and that the school district is not taking the necessary steps to bring the facility up to the constitutionally required minimum. If the court upholds a determination by the council, the court can enter a judgment ordering the council to expend sufficient resources necessary to bring the facility up to the minimum level required by the constitution, as well as ordering the school district to comply with the requirements of the Public School Capital Outlay Act and to pay the required school district share of the costs of improving the facility. If the school district cannot pay these costs from its available funds, the court can order the imposition of a property tax in the district sufficient to satisfy the debt. These provisions are intended to ensure that all school districts participate in the standards-based process by providing a remedy to the state if they do not. During testimony on the legislation, it was noted that the recalcitrant district provisions address a hypothetical, rather than an existing, problem and that, hopefully, the remedy may never be sought.

Additional funding for the statewide public school capital outlay program was provided in the general capital outlay projects bill, House Taxation and Revenue Committee Substitute for House Bill 293 (Chapter 126, p.v.), which is discussed in additional detail in the Appropriations and Finance, New Mexico Finance Authority section. This bill authorizes up to $10 million in short-term supplemental severance tax bonds for the deficiencies correction program. It also appropriates up to $22 million of revenue from the public school capital outlay fund to provide funding for the completion of continuation projects in the Gadsden school district, including at least $18 million toward the completion of Chaparral high school. The appropriation is subject to a number of provisions and was contingent upon passage of Senate Bill 399, which passed, or House Bill 393, which did not.

Finally, House Taxation and Revenue Committee Substitute for House Bill 294 (Chapter 117, p.v.), the General Obligation Bond Act, authorizes a total of $5 million in general obligation bonds to construct classrooms for full-day kindergarten in 19 specific school districts, subject to voter approval of the bonds at the November 2004 general election (see Table 12 in Appendix C for a complete list of general obligation bonds, and see the Appropriations and Finance, New Mexico Finance Authority section for further details on this bill).

EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYEES

Between the bills described in the Public Officers and Employees section and those described below, the climate in this session was generally favorable to employees. Bills were enacted into law that protect the interests of employees in situations concerning workers' compensation and expedite the unemployment claims process. In addition, the legislature revisited issues regarding discriminatory practices by employers.

House Judiciary Committee Substitute for House Bill 277 (Chapter 115) amends the Human Rights Act to clarify provisions in that act regarding unlawful discrimination by an employer when the discrimination is based on an employee's sexual orientation or gender identity. Specifically, the bill restates a 2003 enactment that it is an unlawful discriminatory practice for an employer that has 15 or more employees to discriminate against an employee based upon that employee's sexual orientation or gender identity, and it restores protections against discrimination on other grounds to employees of smaller employers.

Uninsured employers' fees and the uninsured employers' fund were created in 2003, and the fees, which are assessed on employers to pay for administration of the workers' compensation administration, were originally based on a percentage of the claims paid by an employer each quarter. Senate Bill 74 (Chapter 36) amends the Workers' Compensation Act by doing away with the uninsured employers' fees and increasing the quarterly per-employee fee from $2.00 to $2.30. The additional $.30 is distributed to the uninsured employers' fund to cover eligible workers' compensation claims made by workers whose employers have failed to maintain workers' compensation coverage for their employees. An employer that has failed to cover its employees with workers' compensation coverage is liable for expenditures from the uninsured employers' fund to cover the benefits due to eligible employees.

Senate Bill 100 (Chapter 93) expands the role of the secretary of labor in the review of unemployment compensation claims. Under the previous law, the secretary could only affirm a decision of an administrative hearing officer or remand an appeal for further consideration. This bill permits the secretary to also reverse or modify a decision of a hearing officer, thereby expediting the final administrative resolution of an unemployment compensation claim. Except with the consent of the parties, a hearing officer, board of review member or secretary who is related to a claimant, previously represented a claimant or is otherwise prejudiced in some way is precluded by this bill from participating in the claimant's appeal.

ENVIRONMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Due to the constitutionally mandated focus on finance issues during 30-day sessions, few bills were considered or passed this year having to do with environmental issues, and all of them contained provisions with fiscal implications.

House Bill 19 (Chapter 88) amends provisions of the Ground Water Protection Act pertaining to the corrective action fund to increase distributions from the fund to the department of environment by about $2,139,700, which will give the department nearly $5.5 million to fill approximately 70 vacant positions within the department, enhance the department's environmental cleanup efforts and generate about $1.5 million in additional federal money. The department will allocate the money in the corrective action fund to multiple bureaus for the purpose of protecting the state's limited water resources. The bill reduces the amount of the corrective action fund to be used exclusively for cleaning up petroleum leaks to 70 percent, while still accommodating other department water quality programs. (See Table 2 in Appendix B for a note regarding corrective action fund amendments made by House Bill 19.)

In response to an interstate natural gas pipeline explosion in Carlsbad on August 19, 2000 and in order to address general pipeline safety concerns, a pipeline safety fund is created in Senate Finance Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 170 (Chapter 80). The purpose of the fund is to pay for pipeline safety inspections and enhance the staffing and training of the pipeline safety bureau of the public regulation commission, with the goal of assuming inspections of interstate as well as intrastate pipelines. Pipeline safety fees will be collected from those companies subject to the Pipeline Safety Act. Public utility companies that are assessed those fees will be entitled to collect the fees from their customers.

With the passage of Senate Bill 40 (Chapter 78), certain provisions of New Mexico law regarding transportation of hazardous materials are brought into compliance with the federal Uniting and Strengthening America by Providing Appropriate Tools Required to Intercept and Obstruct Terrorism Act of 2001, also known as the USA PATRIOT Act. The bill requires that a background check be conducted by the taxation and revenue department (TRD) on any applicant for a hazardous material endorsement to a commercial driver's license. The bill also repeals Section 74-4F-3 NMSA 1978, which pertained to the hazardous materials transportation permits previously issued by the TRD.

Water that is an incidental byproduct of drilling for, or the production of, oil or gas is defined in Senate Bill 313 (Chapter 87) as "produced water", which may now be used in the production of electricity, among other uses, without a permit from the state engineer if the use is in accordance with energy, minerals and natural resources department rules.

GAMING AND WAGERING

No session appears to be complete until there has been an opportunity for supporters and opponents of gaming in the state to voice their opinions, through various measures, on limiting or expanding gaming or its taxation or regulation. This year, only three bills regarding gaming made it to the governor's desk and were signed. One of those successful measures, regarding liens against lottery winnings to aid in child support enforcement, is described in the Children, Youth and Families section. Of those that failed, a few will most certainly return in future years. House Bill 626 proposed to expand gaming machine operation hours at racetracks; this is the second year when such an initiative was before the legislature and failed. Efforts were made in both the house and the senate to provide for department of health (DOH) oversight of the use of racetrack gaming licensee compulsive gambling funds. Senate Joint Memorial 27, which was adopted by both houses, requests that the governor renegotiate the gaming compacts with the gaming tribes to allow the DOH to collect the compulsive gambling money that the tribes are required by compact to set aside and then redistribute the money to appropriate treatment centers or clinicians. Tribal colleges again unsuccessfully requested that their students be qualified to receive lottery tuition scholarships in House Bill 179. Attempts were also made to either earmark the gaming taxes from racetrack gaming operator licensees (House Bill 314 and Senate Bill 140) or to provide an ongoing general fund appropriation (Senate Bill 211) for municipal or county services in certain communities where gaming occurs.

The state racing commission initiated the amendments to the Horse Racing Act found in House Bill 541 (Chapter 56) to allow it to continue using the federal bureau of investigation (FBI) for background checks on all persons licensed or seeking a license to engage in horse racing and on others employed on the premises of a horse racetrack. The commission submits fingerprints electronically to the department of public safety, which then transmits the fingerprints to the FBI for a comparison search in the national crime information center database. The FBI requires that the commission be authorized in statute to seek background information on licensees and others employed on racetrack premises based on the fingerprints of the licensees or employees, and this bill meets that requirement.

Senate Bill 363 (Chapter 119, p.v.) changes provisions regarding the pari-mutuel tax, which is levied on racetrack licensees at a rate of 2.1875 percent of the gross amount wagered each day, referred to as the "daily handle". Under previous law, licensees were entitled to offset almost the entire amount of tax owed — up to two percent of the daily handle — by the amount spent for capital improvements to the racetrack facilities and, in the case of class B licensees, for advertising and promoting horse racing in New Mexico. The bill limits the amount of tax that can be offset to one-half of the pari-mutuel tax owed. The bill appropriates the remaining half of the tax revenue to the state fair commission for capital improvements at the state fairgrounds. The bill also specifically authorized the commission to enter into a long-term lease of up to 25 years with a racetrack licensee for the use of buildings and facilities on the state fairgrounds; however, the governor vetoed this provision of the bill.

HEALTH AND PUBLIC ASSISTANCE

There were numerous health care initiatives introduced in the 2004 session, generated in part by the governor's health care coverage and access task force and in part by efforts to control health care spending. Perhaps the most ambitious initiative appeared in Senate Bill 538 and House Bill 561, which sought to administratively consolidate, within the general services department, the purchasing of health care benefits for state employees, public school employees and public retirees. The measure did not pass in either house, but there was considerable debate and discussion. Of those bills that did pass and were enacted into law, many focus on making health care delivery in the state better coordinated and less costly.

Senate Bill 34 (Chapter 51) amends the Department of Health Act to require the department of health (DOH) to develop a comprehensive strategic plan for health with a focus on prevention, personal responsibility, access and delivery. The DOH is required to work with public and private entities and to provide findings, recommendations and goals on a broad range of topics related to health care. The plan is to be published every even-numbered year, with updates in odd-numbered years.

The definition of "health care provider" in the Indigent Hospital and County Health Care Act is expanded by Senate Bill 109 (Chapter 94) to include a physician, osteopath, dentist, optometrist or expanded practice nurse who provides outpatient services to an indigent patient with a life-threatening illness or disability. Previously, reimbursement to these providers was limited to emergency services performed in a hospital.

House Consumer and Public Affairs Committee Substitute for House Bill 322 (Chapter 44) and Senate Public Affairs Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 315 (Chapter 50) amend the Public Health Act by requiring hospitals, long-term care facilities and primary care clinics to provide certain information to the secretary of health, who will make an assessment of each health care facility's financial viability, sustainability and potential impact on health care access. The law also includes a temporary provision that requires the secretary to provide findings and recommendations to the interim legislative health and human services committee by October 1, 2004 on the need to apply these reporting requirements to other health facilities as defined in Section 24-1-2 NMSA 1978.

With the enactment of the New Mexico Telehealth Act in House Consumer and Public Affairs Committee Substitute for House Bill 581 (Chapter 48), the legislature recognizes and encourages the use of electronic means, or "telehealth", to support health care delivery. Under the new law, health care providers are not to be disciplined for or discouraged from using telehealth mechanisms; at the same time, health care insurers are not required to provide coverage for telehealth medicine.

In House Bill 254 (Chapter 45), the legislature enacted the Immunization Act, which incorporates previously enacted sections of Chapter 24, Article 5 NMSA 1978 and adds new sections that create and establish guidelines for a state immunization registry. The registry shall provide a single repository for accurate, complete and current immunization records and shall be established and maintained jointly by the DOH and the human services department. Access to the registry is limited and reporting to the registry is voluntary; however, there is still an obligation to immunize children regardless of their participation in the registry.

House Bill 271 (Chapter 46) is a major step toward ensuring effective statewide behavioral health services coordinated by a single entity — the newly created interagency behavioral health purchasing collaborative. The bill pulls together all state agencies that handle or have authority over behavioral-health-related funding and makes the decisions of those agencies, including funding choices, subject to the authority of the purchasing collaborative.

Federal law mandates certain discounts for prescription drugs purchased from manufacturers, and Section 340B of the federal Public Health Act provides to certain hospitals and clinics the greatest discount available to any entity other than the federal department of defense. Nearly all eligible parties in New Mexico take advantage of the discount, but the few that do not are now required to do so by House Consumer and Public Affairs Committee Substitute for House Bill 88 (Chapter 47). The rationale for the mandate is that the state contributes to the support of these entities and can benefit from lower drug prices. Furthermore, if a party can demonstrate to the DOH that the discount it is receiving is greater than that provided through the 340B provision, it may be exempted from the requirement.

Medicaid

Senate Bill 213 (Chapter 54) is one of two bills passed during the session that affect legal aspects of the medicaid program. This bill authorizes the medicaid fraud unit of the attorney general's office to retain and expend certain penalties and costs of investigation recovered on behalf of the state to allow the unit to further investigate and prosecute fraud in the medicaid program. The unit may retain up to $250,000 in fiscal year 2004, $125,000 in fiscal year 2005 and $75,000 in fiscal year 2006.

House Judiciary Committee Substitute for House Bill 468 (Chapter 49) enacts the Medicaid False Claims Act, which provides remedies for obtaining treble damages and civil recoveries for the state when medicaid reimbursement is illegally obtained based on a false claim. The act also provides for a qui tam award — the receipt of a portion of the action's proceeds or settlement by a private person who brings the action. The civil provisions of the Medicaid False Claims Act may be applied in addition to the criminal provisions of the Medicaid Fraud Act.

Tobacco

Two bills were enacted relating to escrow deposits required by tobacco manufacturers that are not parties to the master settlement agreement with the state. House Bill 84 (Chapter 90) clarifies provisions relating to the maximum amount of escrow deposits required, and Senate Bill 66 (Chapter 103) allows the attorney general to require quarterly escrow deposits from those tobacco manufacturers.

HOUSING

In the 2002 general election, New Mexico voters passed Constitutional Amendment 6 (CA 6), which amended Section 14 of Article 9 of the constitution of New Mexico, often referred to as the “anti-donation clause”. The amendment permits the state and local governments to provide land, buildings or infrastructure to create affordable housing, and it requires the enactment of enabling legislation that:

- (1) defines “affordable housing”;
- (2) establishes eligibility criteria for the recipients of land, buildings and infrastructure;
- (3) contains provisions to ensure the successful completion of affordable housing projects supported by assistance authorized pursuant to the amendment;
- (4) requires a county or municipality providing assistance pursuant to the amendment to give prior formal approval by ordinance for a specific affordable housing assistance grant and include in the ordinance the conditions of the grant; and
- (5) requires prior approval by law of a specific affordable housing assistance grant by the state.

In the 2003 legislative session, House Bill 883, which would have implemented the provisions of CA 6, was passed; however, it was pocket vetoed and, therefore, not enacted into law. House Business and Industry Committee Substitute for House Bill 25 (Chapter 104), the Affordable Housing Act, was introduced in the 2004 legislative session, again as enabling legislation for the amendment. It was passed by the legislature and signed into law by the governor on March 9, 2004. In accordance with the amendment, the legislation defines “affordable housing” and specifies two types of eligible grantees — individuals and non-individuals. Eligibility requirements for non-individual grantees are set out in the legislation, but individual grantees must meet requirements established by the New Mexico mortgage finance authority (MFA). The legislation allows the state, a county or a municipality to donate land for construction of affordable housing or an existing building for conversion or renovation into affordable housing or to provide or pay the costs of infrastructure necessary to support affordable housing projects.

The legislation states that the Affordable Housing Act itself is the prior approval required pursuant to Subsection F of Section 14 of Article 9 of the constitution of New Mexico to allow the state to provide affordable housing assistance. A county’s or municipality’s governing body is required to enact an ordinance that authorizes grants and that states the requirements and purposes of the grants. The ordinance must also comply with rules promulgated by the MFA.

The act also contains a provision addressing the successful completion of affordable housing projects. The MFA is mandated to adopt rules covering procedures for compliance with the act by qualifying grantees; application contents and procedures; application evaluation; an award timetable; and other requirements for projects and grantees.

INDIAN AND INTERGOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS

Bills affecting Indian country, tribal communities or urban communities of Native Americans were plentiful during the session. Because of the legislature's actions, money is appropriated for the tribal-state judicial consortium cross court cultural exchange program; the statue of Pope, leader of the Pueblo Revolt of 1680, will finally be placed in the national statuary hall at the capitol in Washington, D.C.; the university of New Mexico school of medicine will begin a Native American health center; and money is appropriated for a domestic violence shelter in Albuquerque to provide services to Native American women and children. Bilingual education funds will now be tracked and their use scrutinized (see the Education, Public Schools section for a description of this bill), and after many years of effort, the New Mexico office of Indian affairs becomes a cabinet-level department headed by a cabinet secretary (see the State Government, Reorganization section for a description of this bill).

Beginning on July 1, 2004, a second and final pueblo becomes a qualified tribe for the purpose of entering into a gasoline tax sharing agreement with the secretary of transportation. Senate Bill 114 (Chapter 109) expands the definition of "qualified tribe" to include the Pueblo of Santo Domingo. In 2003, the legislature gave the secretary of transportation authority to enter into a gasoline tax sharing agreement solely with the Pueblo of Nambe. Since 1997, both of these pueblos have been permitted to distribute 30 million gallons of tax-exempt gasoline annually pursuant to Section 7-13-4 NMSA 1978. Retailers selling the tax-exempt gasoline were supposed to charge gross receipts tax on the gasoline they sold; however, the taxation and revenue department found it difficult to track the gasoline sold and to ensure that the gross receipts tax was being paid. The tax sharing agreements that the state may enter into pursuant to Senate Bill 114 are for a 10-year period and provide that 40 percent of the gasoline tax revenue from 2,500,000 gallons of gasoline per qualified tribe be distributed to the two tribes. After those tribes have been paid, $33,333 of the balance per month of the tax revenue will be deposited in the general fund, and most of the remainder will be distributed to the state road fund.

LAND GRANTS - MERCEDES

The land grant committee was established by statute for the 2003 legislative interim. The committee met in different areas of the state and heard testimony from land grant leadership and members, as well as from different state and local government agencies, on issues particular to land grants-mercedes. As a result of the hearings, the committee endorsed the introduction and passage of Senate Conservation Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 142 (Chapter 124). The bill amends Chapter 49, Section 1 NMSA 1978, which concerns the governance of land grants-mercedes, and it changes provisions regarding management, election procedures and duties, powers and meetings of the boards of trustees of land grants-mercedes. The bill also provides definitions of terms used in the governance of land grants-mercedes and clearly establishes land grants-mercedes as political subdivisions of the state.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Well over 100 bills were introduced during this session having to do with local government issues, and those that passed were focused on matters of finance. Three bills described in this section affect specific communities — Rio Arriba county and the cities of Las Cruces and Santa Fe — while the others apply to counties and municipalities in all areas of the state.

Certain changes to statute that were endorsed in the recommendations of the blue ribbon tax reform commission appear in Senate Bill 88 (Chapter 110), which revises and expands county local option gross receipts tax authority. The bill authorizes the imposition by all counties of an additional one-sixteenth percent of the county gross receipts tax to be used for general purposes, and it creates an “optional referendum selection” process that allows a governing body to choose whether to schedule an election on the imposition of a new tax increment. If the governing body does not choose to call an election, voters have the right to force an election by petition. This optional referendum selection process applies to the imposition of both the first and third one-eighth percent increment of county gross receipts tax and to the imposition of the new one-sixteenth increment of county gross receipts tax, as well as to the imposition of the county correctional facility gross receipts tax. The bill removes the 10-year limit on the county fire protection excise tax, county correctional facility gross receipts tax and county emergency communications and emergency medical services tax; once imposed, these taxes will remain in effect unless rescinded by the governing body. Additionally, the county correctional facility gross receipts tax is amended to authorize all counties to impose the tax (previously, the tax was available only to Chaves, Dona Ana and Valencia counties) and to allow tax revenue to be used for correctional facility operational expenses and the transportation of prisoners (it was previously limited to construction of correctional facilities).

Senate Bill 53 (Chapter 112) amends the distribution calculation for municipalities qualifying for small cities assistance by removing the $56,000 maximum distribution amount. The result is that most of the 46 municipalities that had been receiving the maximum distribution will receive a substantially increased distribution. Under the new formula, all money in the small cities assistance fund — which consists of 10 percent of annual compensating tax revenue — will be distributed, and there will be no reversion to the general fund.

The legislature passed two bills concerning convention center fees. The first, Senate Bill 189 (Chapter 98), amends the Convention Center Financing Act to make it easier for vendees to receive exemptions from the convention center fee. The bill applies only to qualified municipalities, such as Las Cruces, located in class A counties with a 2000 census population of more than 70,000 but less than 100,000. The bill adds nonprofit organizations to the list of institutions exempted from the fee. The second bill, Senate Bill 236 (Chapter 97), amends the Civic and Convention Center Funding Act to increase the maximum rate of the convention center fee, allow rate decreases under certain circumstances and broaden the purposes for which fee revenue may be used. The bill applies to certain local government entities, which include: 1) a qualified municipality in a class A county with a 2000 census population of between 50,000 and 70,000, such as Santa Fe; provided that the city council has authorized the construction of a civic and convention center; and 2) the county in which such a qualified municipality is located; provided that the county and municipality have entered into a joint powers agreement for the collection and expenditure of revenue.

Senate Bill 518 (Chapter 113) permits the voters of Rio Arriba county to decide if they wish to fund health care for the sick and indigent by imposing up to a 1.5 mill property tax levy on the net taxable value of all property in the county. The levy must be voted on by the county's electorate.

MILITARY AND VETERANS AFFAIRS

In a year when many New Mexicans went to Iraq, called up as national guard members in the fight against terrorism, the legislature saw fit to enact provisions made available under federal law to protect service personnel from debt collections while they serve their country abroad. Correspondingly, the legislature committed itself to protecting New Mexico's armed forces economy by authorizing the governor to do everything possible to preserve military bases across the state during the forthcoming military base realignment efforts by the federal department of defense.

Senate Bill 181 (Chapter 37) provides certain benefits for New Mexico national guard service members that track with provisions in the federal Servicemember's Civil Relief Act. The benefits include reduction of interest rates to six percent on revolving credit; protection from eviction in certain circumstances for leased or rented housing property; stay of civil court proceedings if the proceedings affect the service member's ability to defend or prosecute a claim; the ability to change conditions of an installment contract if the service member's duty has materially affected the service member's ability to pay the contracted debt; and prohibition of discrimination in employment against a member of the New Mexico national guard when the member is performing either extended state active duty or federally funded homeland security duty.

Senate Bill 333 (Chapter 16) provides mechanisms for New Mexico to respond to the department of defense base closure and realignment process in 2005. The New Mexico military base planning commission, supported by the office of military base planning and support, has undertaken several initiatives to support New Mexico's military installations. This bill supports all bases in New Mexico, including specific support for military research and development activities in the form of a tax deduction. The deduction is intended to help attract defense system testing contracts, such as for the "Future Combat System and Advanced Tactical Laser Weapons System" programs at White Sands missile range. The general appropriation act includes a special appropriation for the operations of the office of military base planning and support and for an evaluation of New Mexico's military installations as compared to the published department of defense base realignment and closure criteria, as well as for support of various affected communities. The bill also moves the policy and administration arm of the office from the economic development department to the governor's office of homeland security and exempts the office of military base planning and support from the Open Meetings Act when relocation of military units is discussed or information is obtained pertaining to office strategies.

MOTOR VEHICLES AND TRANSPORTATION

Perhaps the most noticed bill introduced during the session that involved motor vehicles was one that did not, in the end, pass. In light of increased fatalities nationwide involving off-highway motor vehicles, the comprehensive additions and revisions to the Off-Highway Motor Vehicle Act proposed in Senate Judiciary Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 174 attracted widespread attention and were the subject of numerous newspaper articles and press conferences. Had the bill passed, it would have imposed requirements for the safe and responsible use of off-highway motor vehicles, increased off-highway motor vehicle registration fees and required nonresident off-highway motor vehicle permits. The bills that did pass in this category centered on conforming New Mexico law to federal law, creating funding mechanisms for public transit systems and allowing for use of slow-moving electric vehicles on public streets.

House Transportation Committee Substitute for House Bill 175 (Chapter 59) contains cleanup language and provisions to bring New Mexico law into compliance with federal law, including the federal Motor Carrier Safety Improvement Act of 1999. The bill changes and adds several definitions to the Motor Vehicle Code and contains provisions pertaining to disqualification and disclosure of traffic conviction records of commercial motor vehicle drivers. Additional amendments to the Motor Vehicle Code provide the motor vehicle division with authority to: 1) retrieve registration plates from unauthorized motor carriers; 2) provide refunds for unused portions of two-year vehicle registration fees; 3) prorate driver's license and commercial driver's license fees for drivers over the age of 75; 4) receive electronic address change requests for driver's licenses and vehicle records; and 5) refuse, suspend or revoke motor vehicle registrations of delinquent taxpayers subject to the weight distance tax. Other changes include the addition of a fourth degree felony penalty for the possession of certain fraudulent documents, the establishment of fees to be retained by the taxation and revenue department for federally required hazardous material background checks and an increase in the number of health standards advisory board members.

House Bill 231 (Chapter 17) creates a municipal and a county regional transit gross receipts tax for management, construction or operation of a public transit system. The taxes, which are subject to voter approval, may be imposed in a municipality or an area of a county that lies within the boundaries of a regional transit district. Each tax may be imposed in increments of one-sixteenth percent, up to a maximum rate of one-half percent. Proceeds from the taxes are transferred to the regional transit district to which the county or municipality imposing the tax belongs.

With the passage of House Bill 388 (Chapter 7) and Senate Bill 226 (Chapter 96), New Mexico joins 37 other states in permitting certain electric vehicles to be operated on public streets. The identical bills enact a new section within the Motor Vehicle Code permitting certain types of four-wheeled electric motor vehicles, defined as "neighborhood electric cars", to be operated on public streets with a speed limit of 35 miles per hour or less, unless otherwise prohibited by the department of transportation or a local authority. The bills also establish minimum standards for these vehicles, including a maximum speed of between 20 and 25 miles per hour.

PROFESSIONAL AND OCCUPATIONAL LICENSURE

Of the few bills considered during this session having to do with licensure, two were enacted into law that steer certain licensing processes and requirements in New Mexico statute toward conformance with national standards — one concerning accountants and the other concerning prescription drug manufacturers and wholesalers. A third bill, which addresses licensure of educational assistants, is described fully in the Education, Public Schools section.

Senate Bill 219 (Chapter 34) changes the examination and scoring procedures for certification as a certified public accountant as a result of a new computer-based testing system, from which eligibility and score data will be reported to the national candidate database. The legislation increases testing frequency from two to four times per year and increases the maximum allowable examination fee from $200 to $400.

Senate Finance Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 536 (Chapter 52) changes the license fee limit for wholesale drug distributors, drug manufacturers and drug warehouses from $300 per year to $5,000 per year. The limit will be reduced to $1,000 when the federal medicare prescription drug benefit is implemented. License fees will be used for a prescription drug program for persons over the age of 65 through an arrangement between the board of pharmacy and a state agency or a state-created entity. The bill also eliminates the $50.00 registration fee for pharmaceutical sales representatives who carry dangerous drugs and, instead, requires a written statement from a representative's employer relating to the safe and secure handling of dangerous drugs and to the employer's compliance with the federal Prescription Drug Marketing Act of 1987.

PUBLIC OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

Partially in response to legislation adopted in 2003 concerning collective bargaining and retirement provisions for public employees, the legislature enacted additional measures during this session impacting certain public employees and retirees. One of the retirement-related measures that passed both the house and senate would have allowed former school board members, city councilors and county commissioners to buy into the retiree health care authority; however, Senate Bill 263, which contained this provision, was vetoed.

Two of the successful pieces of legislation concerning retirement — House Bill 14 (Chapter 2) and Senate Bill 426 (Chapter 68) — amend the Public Employees Retirement Act to exempt those retired members who return to work for the legislature to perform legislative session work, as well as their affiliated public employers, from the requirement of making contributions to the retirement fund. Senate Bill 426 reenacts certain provisions allowing a retiree to suspend his pension if reemployed with an affiliated public employer, and it requires a retired member who returns to work with an affiliated public employer and whose earnings from post-retirement employment exceed $25,000 to make retirement contributions. In those cases, the employer also must make contributions on behalf of the employee. Additionally, Senate Bill 426 places in statute the definition of “state legislator member”; allows vested members who may have already purchased military service credit to purchase up to one year of “air time”; and amends current law to allow certain elected officials to exempt themselves from membership in the public employees retirement association, thus eliminating the usual contribution requirements.

House Bill 451 (Chapter 82) revises the insurance premium contributions of the state, institutions of higher education and public schools so that there are minimum and maximum contributions. The revisions require that the state contribution be the same for all executive, judicial or legislative employees in a given salary bracket; however, within the ranges for public school employees, school districts may contribute different percentages. The General Appropriation Act of 2004, which is discussed fully in the Appropriations and Finance, Appropriations section, contains a $2 million appropriation for fiscal year 2005 to be distributed among state agencies to fund the increase in insurance premium contributions made by the state pursuant to House Bill 451.

STATE GOVERNMENT

Priorities addressed during this session regarding the workings of state government included structure, efficiency and procurement. The legislature completed a reorganization process that had begun a year earlier by passing enabling laws to elevate four state agencies to cabinet-level status. It also took action to streamline operations and to amend property and procurement laws affecting state land and property acquisitions. Furthermore, the legislature amended the Tort Claims Act to provide for interest on judgments against governmental entities or public employees.

Reorganization

In 2003, the legislature allowed the governor to issue an executive order to raise several agencies to cabinet status, contingent upon the legislature’s approval in 2004. After passage of enabling laws, the new cabinet departments are: the aging and long-term services department (House Bill 34 (Chapter 23)); the cultural affairs department (House Bill 92 (Chapter 25)); the Indian affairs department (House Bill 39 (Chapter 24) and Senate Bill 364 (Chapter 18)); and the veterans’ services department (Senate Bill 164 (Chapter 19)). The public education department was also made a cabinet department by House Bill 96 (Chapter 27) (see the Education, Public Schools section for an explanation of that bill).

Operations

Senate Bill 561 (Chapter 39) improves the processes and submissions required by the Accountability in Government Act. The bill changes the date required for the governor's budget submission to January 10 for 60-day legislative sessions and January 5 for 30-day legislative sessions. It also consolidates several deadlines for the department of finance and administration (DFA) and state agencies, which will reduce paperwork and staff time spent on Accountability in Government Act requirements. The date for the DFA to issue instructions to the agencies for development of performance measures is changed from June 1 to June 15, a date that allows the DFA to integrate the instructions for the development of performance measures into the budget request instructions, which are also due on June 15. The bill also establishes a deadline of July 15 for agencies to request a change in their programs or performance measures. A new requirement is the introduction of quarterly reporting for agencies selected by the DFA.

Property and Procurement

Senate Bill 332 (Chapter 123) accomplishes three things relating to state property. First, it amends the State Building Bonding Act to restore the act to its original purpose as a funding mechanism for constructing or purchasing state buildings, paid for with a revenue stream roughly equal to the money saved by not having to pay rent. In 2003, the act had been amended to allow museums to be funded as well, and while Senate Bill 332 returns the State Building Bonding Act to its original purpose, it also protects the bondholders who purchased museum bonds during the past year. Second, the bill authorizes the state to purchase land near the public safety campus on Cerrillos road in Santa Fe, specifying that any land purchased must have in place water, sewer, electricity and other necessary infrastructure. Finally, the bill allows $250,000 of the proceeds from bonds that have been issued to be used by the capitol buildings planning commission during the next four years for master planning and updates to the master plan.

Senate Bill 215 (Chapter 77) provides the department of transportation (DOT) additional flexibility in managing its real estate by allowing the department to divest its excess properties and deposit the revenues into the state road fund. Specifically, the bill requires that, within five years of DOT property acquisition, the department provide the prior owner or prior owner's personal representative or heir the right to purchase the property at the original price with six percent annual interest. However, if the prior owner or prior owner's personal representative or heir does not exercise the purchase option, the legislation allows the department to sell the property on the open market.

Money from the sale of the Cottonwood-Walnut Creek property in Eddy county is appropriated by Senate Bill 326 (Chapter 67) for expenditure in fiscal years 2005 through 2014 to match federal funds for the purchase of land adjacent to Sugarite Canyon and Manzano Mountains state parks and other parks authorized by the legislature for acquisition, now or in the future. Senate Joint Resolution 5, adopted in the 2004 legislative session, approved the sale of the Cottonwood-Walnut Creek property.

Multiple amendments that had previously been enacted in the Procurement Code are reconciled by House Bill 239 (Chapter 62). The bill adds language to exempt from the provisions of the code purchases of advertising in all media and promotional goods for resale by the tourism department, as well as procurement of up to $200,000 by the public education department from the federal department of education relating to training and projects for students with disabilities. In addition, the legislation increases the exemption amount from $5,000 to $10,000 for certain types of procurement by the state fair commission.

Tort Claims

In the past, the Tort Claims Act had not provided for interest on judgments against governmental entities or public employees. Senate Bill 625 (Chapter 108) amends the act to allow for post-judgment interest when the governmental entity or public employee has waived immunity. The bill requires that post-judgment interest be computed at a rate of two percent over the prime rate published in the Wall Street Journal on the judgment entry date.

TAXATION

For many, 2004 will be remembered as the year the tax on food was eliminated. The bill that enacted this measure, which also removed the gross receipts tax on certain medical services and repealed the municipal credit to pay for the changes, was certainly a highlight of the session in terms of legislative debate, public opinion and tax policy implications. As noted below, several other significant tax measures were also passed; however, in terms of the number of bills, there were relatively few tax bills enacted in 2004. Among the bills that did not pass were several technical and administrative “cleanup” bills initiated by the taxation and revenue department and endorsed by the interim revenue stabilization and tax policy committee. Many of these measures will likely be reintroduced in 2005.

House Floor Substitute for Senate Floor Substitute for House Bill 625 (Chapter 116) was the most publicized tax legislation of the session. Removal of the gross receipts tax on groceries has been widely discussed and debated in recent years, and Governor Richardson made it one of his top tax priorities. This bill achieves that goal and represents the most significant reduction in the gross receipts tax base in many years.

The bill creates two new gross receipts tax deductions — one for receipts from food sold at a retail food store and the other for certain receipts of health care practitioners. The loss of municipal and county gross receipts tax revenue due to the removal of these items from the tax base will be reimbursed by the state through new distributions to local governments based on the amount of these deductions claimed by local businesses. The cost to the general fund of the new deductions and the distributions to local governments are offset by the repeal of the municipal credit, which has the effect of raising the state gross receipts tax rate in all municipalities by one-half percent.

The deduction for receipts from the sale of food applies to food intended for home consumption that is eligible to be purchased with federal food stamps and is sold by a retail food store that is eligible to accept food stamps.

The health care deduction applies to receipts from payments to a health care practitioner by a managed health care provider or health care insurer if the payments are for non-medicaid managed care services provided pursuant to a contract. The services must be within the scope of practice of the health care practitioner providing the services. The bill defines “health care practitioner” to include 14 categories of licensed health care professionals, including physicians, nurses, osteopaths, dentists, chiropractors, optometrists, podiatrists, psychologists and various therapists.

Several of the tax measures that passed were endorsed in the recommendations of the blue ribbon tax reform commission (BRTRC), which held hearings throughout the 2003 interim on reforming the state’s tax structure (see the First Special Session section for extensive information on recommendations made by the BRTRC). One bill that came out of the commission’s work was Senate Bill 23 (Chapter 69), which expands the types of government revenue that are subject to the governmental gross receipts tax. Receipts from vehicle parking fees, aircraft tie-down fees and boat docking fees are added to the definition of “governmental gross receipts”.

Another measure endorsed by the BRTRC is the high-wage jobs tax credit enacted by Senate Bill 28 (Chapter 15). This bill, or a bill with very similar provisions, had been introduced for several years, and this year it was strongly supported by the governor and the economic development department. The bill provides that an employer that has more than 50 percent of its sales outside of New Mexico and that is eligible for in-plant training assistance may claim a tax credit equal to 10 percent of wages and benefits paid to new employees in “high-wage” jobs. An eligible high-wage job must pay at least $40,000 per year if located in a municipality with a population of 40,000 or more or at least $28,000 per year if located elsewhere in the state, and the job must have been occupied for at least 48 weeks of the year prior to the year in which the credit is claimed. The maximum credit is $12,000 per year per employee and may be claimed against the taxpayer’s gross receipts tax, compensating tax, withholding tax and other taxes collected with these taxes, but may not be applied against liability for local option gross receipts taxes. If the credit exceeds the taxpayer's tax liability, the excess may be refunded to the taxpayer.

The third bill enacting a recommendation made by the BRTRC is Senate Bill 86 (Chapter 66), which provides an exemption from the motor vehicle excise tax for gasoline-electric hybrid vehicles. This exemption only applies at the time the original certificate of title for a vehicle is issued and does not apply to subsequent sales of the vehicle. The exemption will be in effect for five years, from July 1, 2004 to June 30, 2009.

Senate Bill 385 (Chapter 4) was at the center of the debate on how to pay for escalating medicaid costs. The bill imposes a daily bed surcharge of six percent on the gross receipts of services provided by licensed nursing homes, licensed intermediate care facilities for the mentally retarded and licensed residential treatment centers. Proponents of the bill, including the human services department, estimate that about $22.5 million could be raised by the surcharge. The increased revenue could help the state obtain federal matching funds, which are distributed at a rate of $3.00 of federal funds for every $1.00 of state funds spent on medicaid. To offset the increased costs to non-medicaid patients or their families resulting from the daily bed surcharge, the legislature passed Senate Public Affairs Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 436 (Chapter 99). The bill creates an income tax credit for expenses paid to licensed nursing homes, licensed intermediate care facilities for the mentally retarded and licensed residential treatment centers. The credit is refundable and is limited to $10.00 per day.

House Bill 234 (Chapter 58) increases the state aviation fund share of the gross receipts tax on jet fuel. Previously, 4.31 percent of the gross receipts tax on jet fuel was distributed to the fund; House Bill 234 increases the distribution to 4.79 percent. This bill is intended to hold the state aviation fund harmless from changes passed during the 2003 regular legislative session, when Laws 2003, Chapter 214 increased the gross receipts tax deduction for jet fuel from 40 percent to 55 percent. An earlier version of that 2003 bill contained a 50 percent deduction and increased the distribution to the state aviation fund to a level sufficient to prevent an adverse impact on the fund at that deduction level. The 2003 bill was subsequently amended, however, to increase the deduction to 55 percent while the distribution to the state aviation fund was not adjusted. House Bill 234 makes the adjustment necessary to prevent any adverse impact on the state aviation fund as a result of the increased gross receipts tax deduction for jet fuel.

UTILITIES AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS

The most significant bills enacted this year having to do with utilities and telecommunications impose renewable energy portfolio standards on investor-owned electric utilities and establish a new regulatory structure for mid-sized telecommunications carriers.

Senate Floor Substitute for Senate Bill 43 (Chapter 65) enacts the current public regulation commission (PRC) renewable energy portfolio rule (Rule 573). The bill requires that renewable energy comprise no less than five percent of total retail sales of investor-owned electric utilities by 2006. This requirement increases by one percent per year until 2011, when the requirement is frozen at 10 percent. Renewable energy includes solar, wind, hydropower, geothermal or biomass, but does not include fossil fuel or nuclear energy. The bill does not apply to rural electric cooperatives or municipal electric utilities. The bill allows public utilities to recover costs of complying with the law through the ratemaking process and protects public utilities and their ratepayers from renewable energy costs above a “reasonable cost threshold”. The PRC will establish the reasonable cost threshold by December 31, 2004. If the cost to a public utility of renewable energy generation is above the established threshold, the utility is not required to add renewable energy to its supply portfolio. The bill was collaboratively negotiated by New Mexico’s major investor-owned utilities, the PRC, the coalition for clean affordable energy, the New Mexico industrial energy consumers and representatives of the Richardson administration.

Mid-sized telecommunications carriers, which include companies with more than 50,000 but fewer than 375,000 access lines, will be regulated in accordance with PRC rules established pursuant to House Bill 24 (Chapter 3) once their current alternative forms of regulation expire (for example, on March 31, 2006 for Valor, which is the only mid-sized carrier currently doing business in the state) or, for any new mid-sized telecommunications carriers, upon certification. In essence, the bill requires the PRC to develop a regulatory structure for mid-sized telecommunications carriers that will allow those carriers more flexibility in how they provide and price services while still maintaining the commission’s ultimate authority to protect the public’s interests.

The equipment program and relay system provided for in the Telecommunications Access Act was established in 1993 to facilitate the communication of hearing- and speech-impaired citizens with nonimpaired persons. House Bill 187 (Chapter 106) transfers the administration of the program and system from the general services department to the commission for deaf and hard-of-hearing persons. The bill permits money in the telecommunications access fund, which is funded principally by a surcharge on amounts paid by customers of telecommunications companies for intrastate telephone services, to be used by the commission for the performance of its general statutory duties. The commission may now require an annual audit of each participating telecommunications company.

Utility deposit interest rates will now be set annually according to the five-year treasury note rate with the passage of Senate Bill 258 (Chapter 100). Previous law had set the interest rate at a fixed rate of nine percent.

Closing out this category is Senate Bill 369 (Chapter 81), which requires the PRC to issue rules governing ex-parte communications with the commission's advisory staff by July 1, 2004.

WATER

Many bills on water issues were introduced during the session and, as in past years, a substantial number of them addressed concerns about conservation. The most important water bills introduced this year — one on regulating domestic wells in critical management areas and one creating a strategic water reserve — both failed in the last hours of the session. Of those that passed and survived the governor's veto pen, several are described in other sections as they relate primarily to financing and environment issues (see Related Bills below).

Ways in which water is made available for livestock were addressed in both of the remaining water bills that were enacted into law. Water supply associations organized under the Sanitary Projects Act may now provide water for "stock watering of animals raised for commercial purposes" following the passage of Senate Bill 356 (Chapter 121), which strikes provisions in the act that had banned such uses. In addition, Senate Bill 301 (Chapter 86) requires "stockmen or stock owners" to obtain permits from the state engineer before impounding surface water for watering livestock, thereby closing a loophole in the law that had exempted stock pond impoundments of under 10 acre-feet from the permitting process. The bill also requires that any stock dam or erosion control structure be permitted pursuant to Section 72-5-1 NMSA 1978 if any of the impounded water is used for fishing, fish propagation, recreation or aesthetic purposes.

FORTY-SIXTH LEGISLATURE
FIRST SPECIAL SESSION, 2003

The governor called a special session of the legislature in late October 2003 to enact strict punishments against sex offenders in the state and to comprehensively reform the New Mexico tax system. Prior to the special session, the blue ribbon tax reform commission (BRTRC) was created to “develop recommendations for reform of New Mexico’s tax laws to establish a balanced tax system that provides maximum economic development benefits and maintains necessary government services at an appropriate level”. The commission examined several controversial issues such as personal income tax rates, potential gross receipts tax exemptions for nonprofit organizations, a possible increase in the liquor excise tax and the gross receipts tax on food. Although the commission voted against a recommendation to eliminate the gross receipts tax on food, it took positive action with respect to several tax issues that pertain to families, medical services, economic development, meeting the state’s need for improved highways and other issues. The commission adopted 71 separate proposals to alter the tax system.

In the wake of the BRTRC’s proposals, the governor gave his support to Senate Bill 5, which proposed several changes to the New Mexico tax system that had been recommended by the BRTRC, including:

- (1) state participation in the Sales and Use Tax Administration Act;
- (2) municipality and county authority to impose the compensating tax;
- (3) tax administration reforms;
- (4) a personal income tax exemption of at least $2,500 for persons aged 65 and older;
- (5) elimination of separate personal income tax tables for heads of households;
- (6) reform of the “low income comprehensive tax rebate” by changing its name to the “family and individual rebate”; expanding the table to increase the number of exemptions from six to seven; broadening the income groupings and lengthening the table so that larger families with incomes between $22,000 and $39,000 could receive rebates; and increasing the rebate amounts;
- (7) provision of a “high-wage jobs tax credit” equal to 10 percent of wages and benefits paid to an eligible employee in a new high-wage job up to a maximum of $12,000;
- (8) provision of a gross receipts and compensating tax holiday for small, high-tech research businesses;
- (9) expansion of the governmental gross receipts tax base to include receipts from parking fees, airport fees and marina fees;
- (10) an exemption for new alternative fuel cars from the gross receipts and compensating tax;
- (11) elimination of the cigarette discounts for stamping;
- (12) an increase of the oil and gas emergency school tax rate on oil and carbon dioxide from 3.15 percent to four percent to match natural gas rates;

- (13) an increase of vehicle registration fees by an average of $12.50 per year;
- (14) a mandate for vehicles subject to the weight distance tax to display and produce on demand a weight distance tax identification permit upon passing a port of entry; and
- (15) provision of a gross receipts tax deduction for receipts of licensed health practitioners from payments by a managed care provider for medicare part C services or commercial contract services.

Senate Bill 5 also contained variations of the BRTRC's recommendations to raise certain taxes and fees to fund highway improvements. For instance, while the commission recommended a motor vehicle excise tax rate increase from three percent to 4.5 percent, Senate Bill 5 proposed a rate increase to four percent. The commission recommended a weight distance tax increase of 26.6 percent, and Senate Bill 5 proposed an increase of 42 percent. The commission recommended an increase in overweight and oversized permit fees of $60.00, and Senate Bill 5 proposed an increase of $240. Finally, while the commission recommended an increase in the special fuel tax of $.03 per gallon, Senate Bill 5 proposed an increase in the same tax of $.05 per gallon.

Some of the proposals in Senate Bill 5 sharply contrasted with the proposals of the BRTRC. The bill deviated from the commission's recommendations by conspicuously omitting a $.02 gasoline tax increase supported by the commission. The bill also contained proposals not adopted by the commission, such as the proposal to authorize the New Mexico finance authority to issue $1.585 billion worth of bonds on behalf of the state transportation commission to fund construction of highway projects throughout the state. This proposal later became known as "Governor Richardson's Investment Partnership", or "GRIP". Senate Bill 5 also added a proposal to increase liquor excise tax rates. Although the BRTRC debated a potential increase in the tax, it found that the increase had to be part of a larger social issue of alcohol abuse that should be addressed by the full legislature and the governor rather than by the commission. The legislature and the governor did address the issue in Senate Bill 5: the rate on spirituous liquors was proposed to increase from $1.60 per liter to $3.86 per liter; the rate on beer was proposed to increase from $0.41 per gallon to $1.48 per gallon; and the rate on wine was proposed to increase from $0.45 per liter to $1.13 per liter.

Despite the widespread reforms sought by the governor, some legislators found that while certain reforms proposed in Senate Bill 5 were desirable, other proposed reforms could not be accomplished during the short time span of the special session. Legislators also expressed concern that certain proposals attempted reform where improvement was not necessary. In response, House Bill 15 was introduced as a scaled-down version of Senate Bill 5. The content of House Bill 15 was largely targeted to address concerns that state highway financing needs were not being met by state road fund revenue sources. The bill included a 38 percent increase in the weight distance tax, a requirement for the display of weight distance identification permits, a $.03 increase in the special fuel tax, an average $12.50 increase in vehicle registration fees and a $190 increase in overweight and oversized permit fees. House Bill 15 also included the same Senate Bill 5 provisions that authorized the New Mexico finance authority to issue $1.585 billion worth of bonds on behalf of the state transportation commission to fund construction of highway projects throughout the state. In addition, the bill modified the Senate Bill 5 increase in the liquor excise tax from $.10 per drink to $.02 per drink.

House Bill 15, a scaled-down version of Senate Bill 5, was itself scaled down one last time as House Taxation and Revenue Committee Substitute for House Bill 15 (Chapter 3, p.v.). The substitute bill contained all of the tax and fee increases and bonding measures proposed to raise revenue for highways and the weight distance identification permit requirements contained in House Bill 15, but it eliminated the liquor excise tax increase. The bill passed both house and senate scrutiny and was signed by the governor. Some priority transportation projects that will be funded as a result of the bill's passage include the widening of United States highway 491, formerly United States highway 666, to four lanes between Gallup and Shiprock; improvement of interstate 40 between Grants and Thoreau; improvement of interstate 10 in the Lordsburg area; and improvement of the Coors boulevard-interstate 40 interchange in Albuquerque. An amendment requiring the department of transportation (DOT) to hire a workforce comprised of a minimum of 70 percent in-state residents for 100 percent state-funded projects also passed. The bill expressed the intent of the legislature to authorize the issuance of approximately $1.6 billion in state transportation bonds in annual increments of $350 million; however, the governor vetoed language that required the DOT to request legislative authorization for the 2004 and subsequent annual appropriations.

By adopting House Taxation and Revenue Committee Substitute for House Bill 15 as its final special session attempt at tax reform, the legislature side-stepped many of the comprehensive reforms that the governor and the legislature had originally envisioned when the BRTRC was formed to overhaul the tax system. However, some of the most controversial issues examined by the commission and explored during the special session were resurrected during the regular 2004 legislative session, and familiar tax reform ideas were once again manifested in proposed legislation.

House Judiciary Committee Substitute for House Bills 2, 3, 4, 5 and 8 (Chapter 1) is the comprehensive sex offender bill enacted during the special session. The bill creates a sex offender management board that is charged with the responsibility of studying and making recommendations regarding treatment and supervision of sex offenders. The board will develop standards for the treatment of sex offenders, develop criteria for measuring a sex offender's progress in treatment programs, create a risk-assessment screening tool for sentencing of sex offenders and review the provisions of the Sex Offender Registration and Notification Act.

With regard to sanctions, the bill increases penalties for criminal sexual penetration in the second or third degree when the victim is a child, and penalties are toughened for criminal sexual contact of a minor. In addition, minimum mandatory penalties are specified for second degree sexual offenses when the victim is a child.

The bill also establishes factors to be taken into consideration when determining the duration and conditions of probation or parole for a sex offender. A sex offender is required to serve an indeterminate period of probation or parole of up to 20 years. The factors to be considered by the district court (for probation) or parole board (for parole) include the nature of the offense, the nature of any prior offenses, whether the sex offender has participated in a treatment program and the danger to the community posed by the sex offender.

Notes:

(1) This additional revenue is the consensus estimate for improved tax collections resulting from the 2005 enhanced revenue initiative; the Dept. of Taxation and Revenue received funding for 17 new, permanent positions in connection with the initiative.

(2) The FY 05 impact is uncertain depending on when the new fee is implemented. Beginning in FY 06, recurring revenue is estimated as follows: General Fund $322.7 thousand, Pipeline Safety Fund $772.7 thousand.

(3) It is estimated that a significant share of the revenues will come from the federal government through Medicaid match.
