SUMMARY

Synopsis of Bill

Senate Memorial 28 expresses the Senate's desire to decrease the dependence of New Mexico's economy on military and security-related activities and instead increase "life-affirming and peaceful" economic development. The memorial resolves that New Mexico should provide incentives to its national labs and universities to pursue alternatives to defense and weapons research.

Significant Issues

New Mexico has a long history of fostering science and technology activities related to the defense, nuclear and national security needs of the United States. Many people who live and work in New Mexico contribute to these activities. The memorial seems to relate New Mexico's history and its economic strengths in science and technology to the current problems of terrorism confronting the United States. The memorial stresses that New Mexico's rich science and technology resources can be put to peaceful and productive uses such as alternative energy, improving the environment and technology transfer.

The intent of this memorial may be in conflict with the Governor's initiative to minimize the possibility of military base closings in New Mexico.

OTHER SUBSTANTIVE ISSUES

The Commission on Higher Education points out that New Mexico's institutions of higher education are already engaged in a broad range of "life-affirming" research, including medicine, and environmental protection. CHE adds that New Mexico's research institutions operate independently and pursue missions in the areas of teaching, public service and research.

The Economic Development Department did not raise any issues concerning the memorial.
