Synopsis of SJC Amendment

The Senate Judiciary Committee amended Senate Joint Memorial 31 to clarify the needs and services to be considered for children of incarcerated parents were not to be limited to domestic violence only.

Synopsis of Original Bill

Senate Joint Memorial (SJM) 31 requires the Children, Youth and Families Department (CYFD) and the Human Services Department (HSD) to continue the work of the Children of Incarcerated Parents Task Force created through SJM 15 of 2003. The task force would include representatives from the Department of Health, Public Education Department (PED), Corrections Department, State Agency on Aging, Public Defender Department, a statewide association of district court judges, a state law enforcement agency, a local law enforcement agency, a statewide association of district attorneys, an entity that provides caregiver services for children and families, an entity that is an advocate for children and families and a representative from the law enforcement advisory committee. The charge of the task force would be to develop a plan for identifying children of incarcerated parents and an interdepartmental plan to address their needs.

The Public Education Department notes:

- The Federal Resource Center for Children of Prisoners publication stated: “Until recently, children of incarcerated parents have not received attention as a special population with unique needs. Many factors have combined to hide them from view... Children and their families tended to suffer in silence because of the shame and stigma associated with incarceration.”
- If the task force efforts are successful in improved identification of children of incarcerated parents, those children already enrolled in Medicaid could utilize more services. This could have fiscal implications related to the costs for Medicaid services in the long term.
- The interdepartmental plan recommended a pilot project in Albuquerque in order to meet the needs of these children. The goal of the pilot program is to demonstrate the feasibility of a statewide model.
- Programs to be utilized in the pilot project include Medicaid Managed Care, Project Soar, New Mexico Alliance for Children with Traumatic Stress and the Fatherhood Program. All are already in existence, thereby allowing the pilot project to not require new resources other than interagency coordination and collaboration.
- In 2003, PED was identified as a needed participant in order to investigate:
 - How to ensure consistent compliance with the McKinney-Vento Act, which requires school districts to revise policies and practices that act as barriers to the enrollment of children and youth not living with a parent or legal guardian.
 - Investigating Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPPA)-related issues regarding confidentiality issues.
- This memorial continues the work initiated by the 2003 task force through:
 - Identifying and inventorying needs and services and the barriers to address those services.
 - Developing an integrated plan of service delivery, budget, performance measures and accountability.
- The task force would report its recommendations to the Interim Corrections Oversight and Justice Committee and the Interim Legislative Health and Human Services Committee no later than November 1, 2004.

ADMINISTRATIVE IMPLICATIONS

The memorial does not include an appropriation. All responding agencies will have costs associated with staff and operational resources. However, the agencies expressly noted their desire to continue this project and the ability to absorb any staff and operational costs into existing budgeted resources.

WHAT WILL BE THE CONSEQUENCES OF NOT ENACTING THIS BILL?

The Department of Health notes:

- Children with incarcerated parents will continue to experience stress and manifest behaviors contributing to problems in school and in their community. There will not be an interdepartmental plan to develop a system for these children that includes identification of needs and inventory of services for all children, and a systematic protocol for every incarcerated parent to ensure the best possible planning for their children. The present barriers to access services will continue, and there will not be an integrated plan of service delivery, budgeting, performance measures and accountability for state agencies. The harm to children with incarcerated parents will not be mitigated and taxpayers may bear the increased risk of increasing the future prison population from these families.

All responding agencies expressed concern that the work and progress made to date would be lost.
