fishing and camping, and serves as the gateway to the Pecos wilderness, New Mexico's most-visited wilderness area, drawing visitors from across the state and country and contributing significantly to the local economy; and

WHEREAS, the upper Pecos watershed is an ecologically sensitive area that provides critical habitat for wildlife and supports biodiversity, making it essential to protect this land from further mining activities that could cause irreversible harm to its headwaters and ecosystems; and

WHEREAS, the Pecos river tributaries and nearby wetlands have been recognized as crucial outstanding natural resource waters by the state of New Mexico; and

WHEREAS, in March 1991, spring snowmelt carried contaminants into the Pecos river, killing more than ninety thousand fish, harming wildlife and contaminating community .230326.1

WHEREAS, the rehabilitation of the watershed required significant reclamation efforts by the state and others, and the toxic metal cleanup cost New Mexico taxpayers twenty-eight million dollars ($28,000,000); and

WHEREAS, on April 9, 2019, New World resources, limited, through its Colorado subsidiary, New Mexico LLC, announced it had acquired the Tererro copper-gold-zinc volcanogenic massive sulfide project in New Mexico, raising concerns about the potential for renewed mining activity in the sensitive upper Pecos watershed; and

WHEREAS, in 2023, United States senators Martin Heinrich and Ben Ray Luján and United States representatives Teresa Leger Fernandez and Melanie Stansbury introduced the Pecos Watershed Protection Act in congress, legislation to permanently protect portions of the upper Pecos watershed in northern New Mexico from mineral entry; and

WHEREAS, the proposed Pecos Watershed Protection Act received national recognition and strong support, including the endorsement of the congressional Hispanic caucus in October 2024, underscoring the cultural, spiritual and ecological importance of this area; and

WHEREAS, the United States secretary of the interior, the United States bureau of land management and the United States forest service have proposed withdrawing one hundred sixty-.230326.1

three thousand four hundred eighty-three acres of national forest system lands and one thousand three hundred twenty-seven acres of bureau-of-land-management-managed lands in the upper Pecos watershed from new mining claims and the issuance of new federal mineral leases. If approved, an administrative withdrawal would provide protection for up to twenty years; and

WHEREAS, this proposal has received overwhelming support from acequia organizations, land grants-mercedes, local governments, tribal leaders, conservation groups and communities across New Mexico that are united in protecting the watershed for future generations; and

WHEREAS, protecting the Pecos watershed is not an antimining initiative, but rather a recognition of the unique sensitivity of this region, which is still recovering from the impacts of past mining activities and where further disturbances could result in devastating and permanent consequences on the headwaters of New Mexico's largest river originating within the state;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF NEW MEXICO that the legislature express its strong support for the proposed federal administrative action to withdraw specified lands within the upper Pecos watershed from federal mining and mineral leasing laws to protect this sensitive area and its resources; and
