RE: STAFF REPORT: BREAKFAST AFTER THE BELL UPDATE

INTRODUCTION

As part of its approved workplan for 2014 interim, the Legislative Education Study Committee (LESC) has dedicated time for presentations on school nutrition and public school food service programs, including the Farm to Table program¹, the Weekend Hunger Initiative's backpack program, and the Breakfast After the Bell program.

During the 2014 legislative session, the Legislature amended the provisions of the Breakfast After the Bell program in the Public School Code through Laws 2014, Chapter 16. This informational item for the September 2014 Director's Report will include:

- provisions of Laws 2014, Chapter 16;
- fiscal issues with expanded Breakfast After the Bell;
- FY 15 Breakfast After the Bell awards;
- status of administrative rulemaking; and
- background.

¹ A presentation on the Farm to Table program is tentatively scheduled for the committee's October 2014 interim meeting, while the other two items were scheduled to be heard during the committee's September 2014 interim meeting.

PROVISIONS OF LAWS 2014, CHAPTER 16

Laws 2014, Chapter 16 amended the Public School Code to:

- expand the “Breakfast After the Bell” program to students in middle and high school, whereas it had previously served grades K-8;
- provide funding eligibility for those additional students; and
- establish reporting guidelines for school districts and state-chartered charter schools.

Among its provisions, Laws 2014, Chapter 16:

- renames the “Breakfast Program” in current law to the “Breakfast After the Bell Program”;
- extends the program to middle and high schools in which 85 percent or more of the students were eligible for free or reduced-price lunch (FRPL) under the National School Lunch Act during a prior school year; and
- changes the funding mechanism of the program from a reimbursement to a disbursement process, whereby:
 - each school district and charter school seeking funding under the program submits to the Public Education Department (PED) by June 15 of each year:
 - the number of breakfasts served at no charge by each of its public schools during the previous school year; and
 - the federal reimbursement rate for each breakfast served;
 - requires PED, when calculating the amount of program funding that is due to a school, to assume that student participation will remain the same as the previous year:
 - if a school district or charter school has not previously received state breakfast after the bell funding, PED is to assume that 90 percent of the student population of an eligible public school will participate in the program and fund the school’s program accordingly; and
 - requires PED to inform eligible school districts and charter schools of the amount of program funding they will receive for the next school year by August 1 of each year.

FISCAL ISSUES WITH EXPANDED BREAKFAST AFTER THE BELL

Laws 2014, Chapter 16 specifies that the amended program applies to school year 2014-2015 and succeeding school years, provided, however, that the breakfast after the bell for middle and high school students shall begin the first school year after the Legislature provides funding for that portion of the program.

The original bill had included a $680,000 appropriation from the General Fund to PED for expenditure in FY 15 to account for the program’s expansion beyond elementary school breakfast students. However, that appropriation was struck from the bill during the committee process.

As a result, the earliest that Breakfast After the Bell can be implemented for middle and high school students is school year 2015-2016 assuming that an appropriation is made during the 2015 legislative session for FY 16. The committee may wish to consider additional funding for the expanded program as budgets are formed for the following fiscal year.

FY 15 BREAKFAST AFTER THE BELL AWARDS

For FY 15, the Legislature appropriated approximately $1.92 million to PED for “Breakfast for Elementary Students” through the General Appropriation Act of 2014. According to the Attachment, Breakfast After The Bell 2014-2015 Allocation Table produced by the PED Student Nutrition Bureau:

- 274 elementary schools were awarded approximately $1.92 million in School Breakfast Program funds for school year 2014-2015;
- 162 of those elementary schools had FRPL eligibility rates of 85 percent or higher accounting for $727,422.57 of awards;
- 112 of those elementary schools had FRPL eligibility rates between 84 and 67 percent accounting for the remaining $1.19 million of awards; and
- 29 Bureau of Indian Education (BIE) elementary schools, which do not appear to be eligible for state-funded Breakfast After the Bell, received $133,114.20.

The committee may wish to contemplate whether it is an intended consequence of Laws 2014, Chapter 16 that middle and high schools with FRPL eligibility rates of 85 percent or greater could receive no funding for Breakfast After the Bell while elementary schools with FRPL rates below that level receive over 62 percent of statewide funding for Breakfast After the Bell.

STATUS OF ADMINISTRATIVE RULEMAKING

As of September 19, 2014, no notices of proposed rulemaking have appeared in the New Mexico Register from PED for the Breakfast After the Bell Program. Consequently, the rules currently governing the program, found in 6.12.9 NMAC, do not reflect:

- expansion of Breakfast After the Bell for middle and high schools contingent on funding;
- new reporting requirements for school districts and state-chartered charter schools; and
- changes in the program’s funding process from a reimbursement to a disbursement mechanism.

It is unclear whether the administrative rules not being updated has any practical or legal implications for the Breakfast After the Bell Program.

BACKGROUND

Childhood Hunger and Education

According to information cited by the Department of Health (DOH):

- New Mexico has been ranked highest in the country for childhood hunger and food insecurity;
- new evidence has documented the link between eating breakfast and learning, indicating that skipping breakfast is relatively common among children in the US and is associated with quantifiable negative consequences for academic, cognitive, health, and mental health functioning;
- students who participate in school meal programs have been found to consume more milk, fruits, and vegetables and have better nutrient intake than those who do not participate; and
- students who participated more often in school breakfast programs showed increases in test scores and significant decreases in absences and tardiness compared with those whose school breakfast participation remained the same or decreased.

Provisions in current statute require that the School Breakfast Program provide free breakfast after the instructional day has begun. PED rule further requires that breakfast and instruction occur simultaneously. Although DOH cites information explaining the benefits of breakfast after the bell, some stakeholders and educational experts provided testimony to the LESC during the 2013 interim with regard to the distraction that food may cause in classrooms. Other testimony elaborated on ways in which schools use the breakfast program as an opportunity to provide instruction on etiquette or related instruction.

State and Federal School Nutrition Programs

State Nutrition Programs

In addition to administering the federal nutrition programs listed above, the state has modified the core, federal school breakfast program and provides for locally sourced produce in school lunches:

- Breakfast After the Bell
 - Legislative appropriations provide funding for schools to serve breakfast to students in accordance with the federal School Breakfast Program.
 - Statute requires that food service occur after the instructional day has begun, but PED rule further requires “that instruction occurs simultaneously when breakfast is served or consumed.”
 - The Legislature appropriated about $1.92 million for this program in FY 14, and has provided over $19.6 million in funding since FY 06.

- New Mexico Produce in Schools
 - The Legislature appropriated $100,000 for the purchase of New Mexico-grown fresh fruits and vegetables for school meal programs.
 - The appropriation is not tied to any nutritional standards.

Federal Nutrition Programs

According to the PED Student Nutrition Bureau website, the federal government funds and oversees the following school nutrition programs through the US Department of Agriculture (USDA), which are then administered by PED in accordance with USDA regulations and guidance on these programs for the state-level administrator to follow. These programs include:

- the National School Lunch Program, which includes:
 - the Afterschool Snack Program; and
 - the Seamless Summer Program;
- the School Breakfast Program; and
- the Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Program.

Federal Nutrition Guidelines

The federal Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010 (HHFKA):

- reauthorized the USDA's school nutrition programs through the federal Child Nutrition Act;
- allocated $4.5 billion over 10 years nationwide in order to:
 - increase the number of low-income children who are eligible for free or reduced-price school meals; and
 - expand a program that provided after-school meals to at-risk children.

Among its other provisions, the federal HHFKA introduced certain changes to the Child Nutrition Act related to student nutrition and childhood obesity, among them that:

- the USDA has the authority to establish national nutrition standards for all food products sold on school grounds – vending machines, lunch lines, and school stores;
- the USDA must develop new meal patterns and nutrition standards for meals and snacks in schools, which must be consistent with recommendations of authoritative agencies and current nutrition science and standards must be reassessed every 10 years or sooner;
- water must be available and free of charge during school meals;
- schools will be eligible for performance-based incentives – an increase of the federal reimbursement for school meals, of six cents per meal – for supplying breakfast and lunches that meet nutrition standards outlined in the bill;
- federal funds are to be allocated for school gardens and farm to school programs in which schools partner with local farms to provide nutritious, local foods for meals;

- funding will be available for state agencies and local community organizations to promote nutrition education and obesity prevention including education on healthy food choices and physical fitness programs, with participating programs receiving consultation from nutrition education professionals, academic and research experts, and community organizations that serve low-income populations; and
- the USDA and federal Health and Human Services Department must establish programs to promote healthy eating and reduce childhood obesity, with a focus on using the principles of behavioral economics research to influence healthy choices from a young age.
