SECTION III: NARRATIVE

BILL SUMMARY

Synopsis: Proposes to repeal Sec. 30-7-7.1 of the Criminal Code thereby abolishing the provision that makes it unlawful to sell a firearm without conducting an instant background check.

FISCAL IMPLICATIONS

The removal of background checks prior to gun purchases could potentially increase the prison population and those placed on community supervision due to high-risk individuals with criminal histories, histories of violence or mental health issues having easier access to firearms and subsequently engaging in criminal activity. The average cost per inmate for the department, based on calculations from FY23 expenditures, is around $57,103 a year or roughly $156 per day. In comparison, the average cost to oversee an individual on community supervision is approximately $6,108.
